HOW HIGH SCHOOL BOARD WAS SUSTAINED BY THE UNION HI MASS MEETING

Recommendations Are Voted With Some Opposition
From Those Who Had Concentrated on the Immediate Erection of a Plant on Northwest Side

CONFERENCE ON JUNIOR HIGH ORDERED
John R. Gray, Rudolph Streit and a Few Supporters Endeavor in Vain to Segregate the Objectives of the Meeting

Purchase of a high school site on the north-west side, completion of the plant on Verdugo road, and a consolidation meeting of school boards of the high school, city schools and Los Angeles county board were effected by a big majority vote of instruction at the mass meeting last night in the high school. The high school trustees were sustained, the recommendations they advocated were given.

The opposition to the completion of the high school began its attack early on the recommendations. John R. Gray, Rudolph Streit, and a few followers, fought to split the recommendations into two parts when placed on the ballot.

Mr. Gray gained the floor repeatedly and endeavored to switch the proposed bond issue so that it would be spent on the northwest side. He always had a second to his motions, and amendments to motions and his general campaign for the northwest side. He was opposed by John Mitchell of Kenneth road, who drove wisdom into the northwest forces, and was greatly applauded.

When the votes were counted it showed that the meeting stood 67 for a separation of the two-phased recommendation for a northwest site and for the completion of the Verdugo road plant, carrying the bond issue of $350,000. The whole recommendations were then voted by more than 90 ballots.

The joint meeting of the educational boards was then directed by the meeting, on motion of R. D. White, superintendent of city schools. The meeting will arrange for the beginning of a junior high school system, with the old high school plant as an initial unit.

Dr. Jessie Russell acted as chairman of the meeting, in her usual sprightly manner. W. B. Kelly early in the evening put through a motion for the nomination and election of J. C. Sherer as vice chairman, to serve in the event of a possible appeal from the ruling of the chair.

When such a division occurred, however, Mr. Sherer was absent, thinking of something else, and Dr. Russell handled the contest with the entire approval of the meeting. Later it was discovered, and Mr. Sherer was called to act, which he endeavored to do. The dissent was upon a minor amendment to the motion to recommend in accordance with the views of the high school board.

The complete story of the evening will be found on another page.

Members to Assemble

Members are to assemble with their families at the lodge hall at 10 a. m.

Because the night was unusually warm, the attendance was below normal, and after the drill team had devoted about an hour to drill work, an adjournment was taken.

PEACE OR U. S. INTERVENTION IN BALANCE

Issue at President's Conferences on Rail
Warfare

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Extension of the paralyzing effect of the railway shopmen's strike seems probable as heads of the 16 railroad labor organizations, including the powerful "big four" brotherhoods, met here today to decide upon a program of united action in the menacing controversy.

The conference opened shortly before 11 o'clock with a few of the rail leaders absent, because of late trains.

From the conference is expected to come a warning that the brotherhood members and others will be forced to quit work if equipment is allowed to deteriorate much more and armed railroad guards continue to shoot workers, as has been charged by the men.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Peace on the railroads or continued war, with the probability of extension of the strike to the "big four" brotherhood and federal intervention was the issue in separate conferences today between railroad executives, leaders of the 16 railroad labor organizations and President Harding and his cabinet.

The most important conference of the three admittedly was the meeting here of leaders of the 16 railroad labor organizations, including the powerful big four brotherhoods.

With sporadic strikes of rail workers other than the shopmen becoming more numerous each day and union labor feeling that the railroads are out to smash the unions, the belief prevailed here today that the full strength of all the railroad organizations might be thrown into the strike on the side of the shopmen as the result of today's conference.

Shopmen's leaders will meet to consider President Harding's proposal that the seniority question be submitted to the railroad board, but its rejection is regarded as certain.

At the same time executives of the roads will be meeting in New York to consider the proposal.

Definite Steps to End
Nation-wide Conflict
Are Taken

CONFERENCE IS ON
1920 Rate and Continuation of Check-off System, Is Basis

CLEVELAND, Aug. 11.—Definite steps to end the nation-wide coal strike and immediately resume production at 76 per cent of the country's bituminous mines were taken here today.

Members of a newly created sub-committee met to draft a wage scale for submission to the conference of miners and operators of the central competitive coal fields.

President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers declared coal will start pouring back into the nation's empty bins within a week if the pay schedule is adopted.

The new scale, it was indicated, will be based on the 1920 wage scale and continuation of the check-off system.

Termination of the strike on the basis of such an agreement would be heralded as a victory by both sides.

CARRIERS' MEET
WELL ATTENDED

Jewel City Branch of National Organization,
Entertains Visitors

The meeting of the Jewel City branch of the Letter Carriers' association was held last night in Knights of Pythias hall, and was very well attended. Several letter carriers of the Los Angeles branch No. 24, of the National Association of Letter Carriers, were present, and gave impromptu talks.

Alfred Tishler, president of Angel City branch No. 24, gave a talk in regard to the organization, the importance of backing up officers of the branch in Glendale, and of the good things they have accomplished in the short time the branch has been in existence.

Thomas Piggett, vice president of Angel City branch, spoke on "When and How to Get New Members." He stated that in his experiences he has found that the best time to get new members into the organization is as soon as they become substitute carriers.

Joe Fadden, manager of the Los Angeles letter carriers' band, stated he was pleased to have an opportunity to thank the boys for the assistance they have rendered the band.

Bill Riley, chairman of the publicity committee, spoke on how it would be possible to raise funds to send delegates to the state letter carriers' convention, to be held in Eureka, Calif., September 3, 4 and 5. The delegates chosen to represent the Glendale letter carriers are Bill Gamble and A. C. Holcomb.

Henry Meyers, a soloist in the letter carriers' band of Los Angeles and to whom a great deal of credit is due for the organization of the band, gave a little talk, which was greatly appreciated.

The president of the Jewel City branch extended an invitation to the Los Angeles carriers to come again and attend the regular meetings in K. of P. hall, every Thursday at 8 o'clock.

At the close of the meeting the ladies' auxiliary of the Letter Carriers' association had a surprise prepared in the way of refreshments, which was greatly enjoyed.

CRISIS IN RAIL STRIKE LOOMS BIG

Walkouts of Big Four Brotherhoods Continue to Spread

TRAINS ARE TIED UP
Santa Fe Line Is Blocked
in Arizona Points,
Near California

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—The most serious crisis of the rail strike loomed today as walkouts of "big four" brotherhoods spread.

Danger points, where train crews were alleged to be operating at peril of their lives, had permission to strike.

Many trains were already tied up. The curtailment of train service threatened to increase.

Santa Fe officials here declared an effort would be made today to move trains tied up at Seligman, Ariz., by the walkout of the brotherhoods there.

Santa Fe trains were also standing in the yards at Barstow and Needles, Calif.

Brotherhoods have refused to operate the trains until all guards have been withdrawn from railroad property.

Railroad officials here stated that the walkout at Needles threatened the transcontinental service of the Santa Fe. Needles is one of the most important division points on the road.

"Big four" brotherhood leaders in Chicago received telegrams from Cleveland headquarters giving permission for a walkout on the Illinois Central, the Rock Island and the Chicago and Northwest. "If employment of these lines is unbearable on account of the S. P. strike," similar telegrams were sent to Atlanta and Antigo, Wis.

H. K. Daugherty, assistant grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, scouted the statement that a general walkout was scheduled on the Illinois Central.

Officials of the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern at Joliet, expressed confidence that brotherhood men on strike there would return to work within a few days. They refused, however, to give reasons for their statement.

National guard units were on guard at the Chicago and Alton yards at Joliet, which threatened to spread the brotherhoods walkout to that road.

S. P. FIREMEN STRIKE
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—Strike of railroad firemen on the Southern Pacific lines at Ogden, Utah, which early today threatened to tie up the company's transcontinental trains, was settled at noon today, according to an announcement from the office of President Sproul of the railroad here.

MISS ADELINE WOODBURY
Who Will Dance at Picnic

GLENDALE CREDIT MEN SECURE ELF FOR PICNIC

Tiny Adeline Woodbury
of This City to Give
Toe Dance

A treat is in store for picnickers at the dedication of the new city park in Verdugo Woodlands on Wednesday, August 16. This is the day that the Glendale Credit association will give its first all-Glendale picnic. Little Adeline Woodbury has been prevailed on to give two of her toe dances on that day. She will dance in the pavilion at 3 o'clock and again at 9.

Little Adeline, who is only 10 years old, is a Glendalian. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mort H. Woodbury, 1111 Orange Grove avenue. She has been giving exhibitions of toe dancing for the past two years. Previous to that she was on the stage in Chicago, her home, where she created a sensation with her singing.

She has sung professionally ever since she was two years old. About three years ago her voice evidenced signs of strain and she was compelled to quit professional singing.

Young as she is, Adeline is in love with the stage. When told that she must quit singing, she insisted on taking up fancy dancing. After studying for a short time she was given a professional tryout and was an instantaneous hit.

Two years ago she and her mother and father moved to Glendale. She has since coming to California danced in most of the large Los Angeles theatres and on last Christmas day danced at the Alexandria hotel of that city.

She is also taking lessons on the saxophone from Bill Bodie, Glendale's saxophone virtuoso, and expects to use this professionally within a few months.

Locally, little Miss Woodbury has danced in the recent Pearl Keller review, staged at the Glendale theatre.

She will give the "Intermezzo Russe" and the coquette dance, "Flirtation," at the picnic. Her costume for the first number will be a soft white dress. In the flirtation dance she will wear a pink ballet dress covered with spangles.

ROY KENT AGAIN
ASSUMES HEAD OF ROTARY

Returns From Fortnight
Tour to Preside at Club Banquet

Roy Kent, who has just returned from a fortnight's outing in the north, was in his place as presiding officer, when members of the Rotary club assembled for their regular noonday luncheon in the chamber of commerce banquet hall, Thursday, and received the greetings of his associates.

Rotary songs were sung with enthusiasm, under the leadership of "France" Henry, and the assistant secretary read a most interesting letter published in the Retail Grocers' Advocate, written by J. Herbert Smith, secretary of the Glendale club, who is now traveling in Europe. In this letter Mr. Smith described a visit to the houses of parliament and a debate which he heard there. He has toured continental Europe as well as England, and is returning to the United States September 15.

"Dick" White, chairman of education, reported that the local club is now caring for the education of eight children, who are physically unable to attend school.

"Art" Dillman read a letter addressed to all Rotary clubs, by the president of the Rotary International and printed in a pamphlet published by Raymond M. Havens, president of the San Francisco club.

Announcement was made that Ernest Ford, accompanied by his wife, had been called east by the illness of Mrs. Ford's brother.

Another announcement stated that "Bill" Howe would entertain the club next Thursday. Members were urged to assemble their families at the community picnic, to be held next Wednesday in the new city park, and Dave Crofton and A. R. Eastman were made a committee to look over the ground and make suitable arrangements.

COMPROMISE SOUGHT ON GLENDALE-MONTROSE ELECTRIC LINE FARE

Conference of Glendale Advancement Committee and Railway Officials Leads to Promise of New Survey by Road

BONUS FUND COLLECTION IS HALTED
Company Realizes District Is Growing and Means
Increase of Patronage, Which Would Yield
Large Returns in Future Development

L. C. Barton, representing President Trainor of the Glendale-Montrose railroad, accompanied by P. L. Hatch of this city, superintendent of the road, had a conference this morning with members of the railroad committee of the Glendale Advancement association, including President C. W. Ingledue, Secretary Herman Nelson and others, relative to the rates of fare to be charged in the event that the Union Pacific line is taken over and electrified to a point where it will connect with the yellow car lines of Los Angeles.

The committee has been hard at work canvassing for subscriptions to the bonus fund of $25,000 which the Glendale-Montrose line has named as the condition on which it will take over the line. But the support which the committee expected to receive from the northern section of the city, including Verdugo Woodlands, has not been forthcoming. Mr. Twining of the Newport company and representatives of the Sparr and Ross interests say they are ready to act generously as soon as the fare rate is settled to their satisfaction and not before.

When asked in regard to the conference Mr. Hatch stated that the company's representatives will go over the matter again and make a close survey to see what, if any, compromise it would be possible to make and will be ready in a few days to advise the committee of the results of that survey.

"We realize," said he, "that sewer and gas mains soon to be laid in Verdugo Woodlands are certain to stimulate a great amount of building there and increase of the population which will mean increased patronage for our line. In making our survey we will take the prospects for the future into account as well as present patronage. We cannot promise now that we will be able to meet the expectations of everybody, but we hope to be able to make a compromise which will line these interests up with us instead of against us."

Mr. Trainor is making slow but sure improvement. His illness is the result of an accident he suffered at Catalina several years ago, when he fell from a height into a gulch, breaking a leg and being unable to get either up or down. He laid there for 48 hours without attention until rescued with ladders, and has never recovered from the experience.

These facts being considered, it narrowed down to the name "Glendale-Verdugo park." It is a name which at the same time tells the place and the city in which the park is located.

Name suggestions were received by the committee from various different states, which shows that not only are those living in Glendale interested in the welfare of this city.

One letter, coming from "Back east" is of especial interest. It read as follows:

"If the report of relatives of the undersigned to the effect that Glendale is a 'veritable paradise to live in' I would think that 'Paradise park' would be a good name for the new city park."

This writer enclosed a clipping from The Glendale Daily Press, in which there was an announcement of the name contest.

CALIF. PEACHES TO MEET EASTERN COMPETITION

Pomology Expert Tells Hard Facts to Growers

If California peaches are to retain a place on the eastern markets which will insure profitable returns, the highest standards of grade and pack must be maintained, says W. P. Duruz, assistant in the pomology division, University of California farm at Davis. Peaches are grown commercially in about half of the states of the union. In view of this general production, the competition that California fresh peaches must meet makes the problem of disposal of the crop an important consideration.

Circular No. 241, "Harvesting and Handling California Peaches for Eastern Shipment," by W. P.
Duruz, has just been issued by the agricultural experiment station to supply to California peach growers
the information necessary to harvest and market their crop profitably. A copy of this circular may be obtained by addressing the director of the University of California
Agricultural Experiment Station, Berkeley.

LOST ATLANTIS ANTEDILUVIAN WORLD

The Proof of the Ancient Land Comes to Light

By HANNAH L. HUKILL, M. D.,
Physician and Chiropractor.

Synopsis: A Press editorial stated the United States government had run up a flag on the new island.

which lately lifted its head in the southern Pacific. The preceding articles have sought to briefly explain that the rising land was the ancient continent of Lemuria, which was destroyed by volcanic cataclysm over a million years ago. Geological findings indicate this continent existed and, because of great earthquake activity in the floor of the ocean, geologists say it will rise again.

Archaeological Research

Not only geologists have been working to prove the existence of the lost Lemuria and Atlantis, but archaeologists, within recent years have been discovering along the shores of Africa the ruins of a mighty and wonderful city, which point to the high place attained by the Atlanteans in their civilization. For centuries hoary tradition has been beckoning the explorer and whispering of cyclopean ruins that but await the spade of the unburying. One of the well-known workers along this line was Dr. Heinrich Schliemann, the eminent archaeologist, who discovered the site of ancient Troy. During the excavations of the ruins of Troy he found a bronze vase of great size, which contained various pieces of pottery, small images and coins of peculiar metal and objects of fossilized bones. The bronze vase was engraved in Phoenician hieroglyphics and, when translated, they read: "From King Chronos of Atlantis." Ten years later pieces of pottery exactly the same shape and of the same material, brought from Central America, were discovered in the Louvre, Paris. They, however, had no Phoenician characters inscribed on them. A careful chemical analysis of the pieces of each collection showed they were of the same peculiar kind of clay, which was not like that found in either Phoenicia or Central America. The metal objects were made of a combination of aluminum, platinum and copper, which had not been found before among the ruins of the ancients. Dr. Schliemann was too old to take up the work of discovering Atlantis, but he left directions with an intimate friend for his family as follows: "This may be opened only by a member of my family who solemnly vows to devote his life to the research outlined in it." The package lay for 16 years in the "Bank of France, where money was on deposit to defray expenses of the research, before a grandson, Dr. Paul Schliemann, qualified by taking the necessary vow to devote his life to the work. After years of indefatigable work in Egypt, Central America, South America and all the archaeological museums of the globe, Dr. Paul Schliemann expressed himself without hesitation in the following words: "I have discovered Atlantis and have verified the existence of that great continent, and the fact that from it sprang all the civilizations of historic times, without a doubt." Dr. Schliemann predicted his book on the explorations and discoveries made would startle the scientific world.

The rise and fall of civilizations is not a mechanical development. Nations come and nations go, each race-type working out its own destiny through evolution according to the great eternal scheme of things, but no nation continues forever. The fate of Nineveh, of Tyre, of Greece and Rome, will be the fate of all. Some will vanish utterly, as did Atlantis, beneath the waves, while others, like Greece, may leave to the world beautiful specimens of past glory embodied in marble, which the world of art has never rivaled.

Atlantis had been in the golden age of her glory for thousands of years, when degeneracy and decay began to develop. This was after the king initiates ceased to incarnate into the patrician families. The whole race, from its very inception, had been very psychic and the great teachers, who had guided them for so many millennia taught them the use of their higher forces was for the good of humanity and not for selfish purposes. However, after many centuries much of this teaching was forgotten and many people lost sight of their own higher nature. Corruption began to manifest itself. Wealth was

MISS WILSON IS HONOREE AT SHOWER

Dainty Party Is Given by the Misses Longley
and Love

Miss Murray Longley and Miss Madeline Love entertained with a kitchen shower at the home of the latter, 320 West Elk avenue, celebrating Miss Hazel Wilson, who will marry Mr. Herbert Bessant the first week in September.

The rooms were beautifully decorated in pink and white and the same color scheme was also carried out in the dainty refreshments of French pastry and strawberry ice. During the evening, the game of "hearts" was played by the guests, Miss Esther Bessant winning high score, and Miss Hazel Wilson consolation.

The shower was presented in a novel way, the hostesses blindfolded Miss Wilson and told her that married life was filled with many obstacles, but inasmuch as her married life would be filled with love the obstacles would not be burdensome. She was then told to pick up the obstacles in front of her which were found to be many useful articles for the new home she will soon occupy.

Those present were Miss Hazel Wilson, Miss Edna Farmer, Miss Agnes Tupper, Miss Mary Rich, Miss Edith Schuyler, Miss Marion Jones, Miss Bessie Carney, Miss Esther Bessant, and the hostess, Miss Madeline Love, and Miss Murray Longley, Mrs. Love, Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Longley.

REPORTS MADE TO AMERICAN BAR MEMBERS

While Work Is Crystalizing
in Various Forms,
Convention Relaxes

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—Completion of the reports of the committees occupied a large part of the day's program of the convention of the American Bar association, in session here. The following reports were made:

Admiralty and Maritime Law, Robert M. Hughes; Noteworthy Changes in Statute Law, William Marshall Bullitt; Uniform Judicial Procedure, Thomas Wall Shelton; Membership, William L. Putnam; Classification and Restatement of Law, James D. Andrews; Legal Aid Work, Reginald Heber Smith; Aviation, Charles A. Benton; International Revenue Law and its Means of Collection, Charles Henry Butler.

Following the reports of committees, nomination and election of officers for the coming year was held, and miscellaneous business taken up. The convention was then adjourned.

During the afternoon the members and their guests took a motor trip around San Francisco and the bay and peninsula district as guests of the California bar.

The annual dinner will be held tonight in the palm court of the Palace hotel, President Severance presiding.

Tomorrow an all-day excursion will be held for the members and their friends as guests of the California Bar association.

This year's convention was declared by members and officers to have been one of the most important and successful ever held.

A PRIZE POKER

A famous engineer was entering a distinguished Englishman before showing him over his works. The visitor complained of the insignificance of everything American.

"Why," he said, "we have a castle in London with a fireplace as big as this room."

When in the works the engineer showed his visitor a huge ship's shaft.

"What's this for?" asked the Briton.

"Oh," responded the engineer, "that's a poker we're making to fit your fireplace!"—Chicago Herald.

abundant and the aristocratic Toltecs failed to live up to the teachings of their ancestors. Knowledge was prostituted to individual gain, and control over the powers of nature was turned from service, as used by the king initiates, to oppression. Personal aggrandizement, the attainment of wealth, authority, position, the humiliation and ruin of their enemies became more and more the objects towards which their occult powers were directed. The desecration of this sacred knowledge is called black magic or sorcery. Nothing so dwarfs the progress of the soul and develops lust, brutality, ferocity and all expressions of the animal nature in man as such practices. It would not be edifying to describe the horrible scenes carried on by the lords of the dark face, with the aid of the dark forces of the nether world. Suffice it to remark that after centuries of such debauchery the rulers of our globe issued an edict that the continent must be destroyed to rid the earth of the malignant practices used as religious rites. Before the catastrophe occurred thousands of the population, who had continued to follow the teachings of the divine dynasty, were warned of the impending disaster and escaped to the surrounding countries and were saved. So beneath the waves of the night Atlantic, which through the ages has borne the argosies of the known world, lies that drowned nation of the Atlanteans, the real antediluvians.

ALPHA CHAPTER OF DELPHIANS MEET

The Alpha chapter of the Delphi society held its meeting at the home of Mrs. Charles Marshall, 525 South Central avenue, yesterday afternoon. A very interesting book review on Egypt was given by Mrs. W. F. Nash.

A dainty course of ice cream and cake was served late in the afternoon by the hostess to the 25 ladies present.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Charles Marshall, the fourth Tuesday in September.

B. M. SELL BUYS THE WHITE INN

Mrs. B. M. Sell has purchased the White Inn cafeteria and cafe at 223 South Brand boulevard, and has made many changes for the betterment of service. Mrs. Sell has had a long and varied experience as a caterer, and comes to Glendale to make her home. The large private dining room will be utilized for dinner parties, and societies and clubs desiring to give banquets and receptions. Mrs. Sell says her 50-cent merchants' luncheon cannot be beaten for the price, and she extends an invitation to the Glendale public to visit her cafeteria.

C. C. COOPER IS ON WAIKIKI BEACH

Postal cards picturing the beach at Waikiki, Honolulu, and other scenes in the Hawaiian islands, have been received by friends of C. C. Cooper of this city, who enjoys him the privileges he is enjoying in foreign travel. Under date of July 31, he wrote to "Captain Tom Watson" from the beach named, that the weather was delightful and the water fine for bathing.

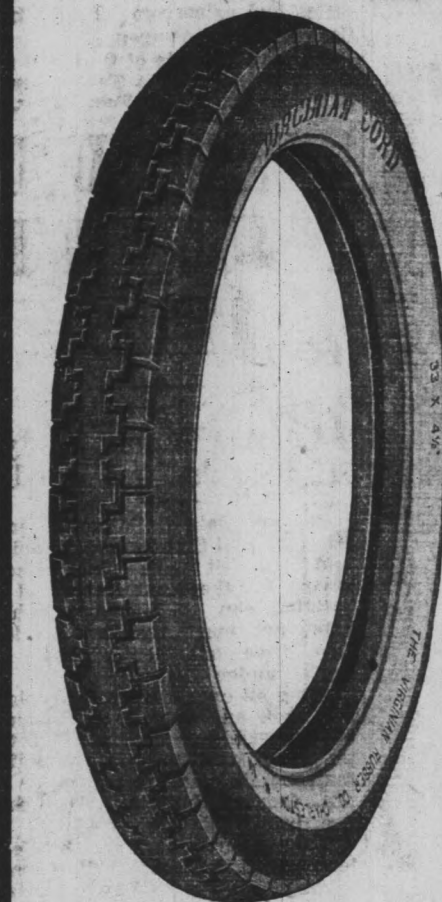

Upper and Lower Canada were united in 1841.

COURT SHOPS ON BROADWAY ARE NOW OPEN

Six Merchants Have Taken Space in Unique District

The Court Shops, Glendale's most unique shopping district, has opened. The court has accommodations for 12 shops and six of them are already rented and the tenants moved in.

This district on East Broadway is one of the cleverest designed blocks in the city. It is built along the semi-Spanish lines.

In the center of the block there are lights on graceful standards and benches for the tired shopper.

The shops all open out into this cement court and have an entire glass front. This glass front is quite an innovation, giving the prospective customer an opportunity to view the stock of the store from the outside and make tentative selections before entering the shop.

The tenants that have already moved in are:

Lamp and Gift Shop, carrying a line of beautiful lamp shades and standards and unique gifts that bespeak originality and taste. This shop is on the left of the entrance facing on Broadway and the court.

Next door to the Lamp and Gift Shop is the E. C. Hale Book Store. Mr. Hale carries a complete line of literature, ranging from the latest best seller to the weightiest works on the sciences and arts.

The next shop is the Stocking Box, devoted entirely to the display of high-class hosiery for men, women and children.

The last shop occupied on the left side of the court houses the office and salesroom of the Dixon Sash and Door company.

On the right side of the court are the shops of the La Facile Corset Shop and Dr. Scholl, Foot Easer.

MATERIAL EXHIBIT IS ALL THAT NAME IMPLIES

Anyone Interested in Building Should Study Materials First Hand

The Glendale Building Material Exhibit is all that its name implies and more—it is a place where anyone in the least interested in building can go and, in one-half hour, get more real information, free, than one could obtain in weeks under the old system of chasing all over town to this place and that, and even then it would be impossible to see many of the things of the up-to-date building features that are on exhibition at the Central building, 111 East Broadway, Glendale.

For instance, there are the Peerless built-in features, folding seats, folding ironing boards, breakfast nooks, medicine cabinets and many other things.

Marshall & Stearns company has a patented oscillating portal wall bed there for all to see and examine. Pratt & Lambert have their architectural wood finishes, samples of paints and varnish.

The Pioneer Paper company has installed an ideal bungalow with the roof made of the durable and beautiful Pioneer slate-surfaced shingles, which are very attractive. Howard Woodworking shoppe of Pasadena has an exhibit of iron lises and pergolas, etc. Jewel Electric company has a very beautiful and artistic display of electric light fixtures, etc. Williams Radiator company has an excellent display of the Clow gas-steam radiators, which are, without doubt, the best on the market.

Coker & Taylor, plumbers, have an exhibit of stoves, floor heaters, gas radiators, Rudd instantaneous water heaters, etc. The General Water Heaters corporation has the DeLuxe automatic storage type water heater here on display. Frank B. Lash, painting contractor, has samples of his very excellent workmanship and materials. Stevens Paint store has a display of wall papers, paints, window shades, etc. Concrete Block & Tile company has erected a wall showing the strength, stability and illustrating the labor-saving method of construction through the use of hollow blocks.

The Universal Silicate Stucco company has samples of exterior and interior stucco and wall finishes in many colors. The National Incinerator works has one of its incinerators here on display. The Inland Floor company has taken a space and is now busy installing its exhibit, which will give one a fine idea of the different hardwood floors. Tehhe Glendale Hardware company has a fine and complete line of building hardware here, which you will find very interesting. A. T. Dobson has a fine exhibit of the petriwood drain boards, floors, mantels, etc. The Pacific Cotton Mills company of Alhambra has one of its wonderful values in mattresses here on display. Also there is a miniature sample of the world-famous receivers, that may be installed in any rear door, and the owner may leave home with the satisfying knowledge that his deliveries are going to be perfectly safe and secure until they return.

Altogether the Glendale Building Material Exhibit is a wonderful as well as useful addition to our beautiful city of Glendale.

BERLIN—Thirty Afghans have arrived in Berlin for an educational course at the Prussian ministry of education.

NORMAN, Okla.—Forty students enrolled in Oklahoma university's athletic coaching class.

MULTUM IN PARVO MIGHT BE MOTTO OF COURT SHOPS

Charming Salesrooms in Great Variety Are Already Established

One visitor to the Court Shops remarked: "They are too sweet for anything." They certainly are charming as far as they have gone and there seems every reason to expect that all will be tenants in the near future. However, sweet they may be, they are not cloying, because there is great variety in their attractions.

"Multum in parvo" should be their general motto and all will soon be giving an excellent demonstration of what may be accomplished in a small space if none of it is wasted and all beautified.

Norton P. Buck's "Stocking Box" is a fascinating place and a tribute to his skill as designer and decorator, for he it was who patterned the dainty frieze of black stockings on his yellow wall, and repeated the design in gold paint on his black chairs, to match the yellow and black color scheme of the awnings which front his and other places of business in the court. His showing is attractive now and he says as soon as the rail strike ends so that he can get stock, he will have the Corticelli goods, the finest line of silk hosiery made by this old, old firm which formerly supplied our grandmothers with sewing silk. His shop is No. 10, at 211 East Broadway, which is the general number of the court.

Next door at No. 11 is a most interesting exhibit of samples from the manufacturing plant of the Dixon Sash and Door company, who thought it well to establish an office in the fastest growing city in the United States, with P. E. Hoyt as office manager. Mr. Hoyt is a resident of Glendale and a booster for it.

Book lovers and those who prize old steel engravings as treasures will be disposed to linger around the shop established by E. C. Hale, wherein he buys and sells books and magazines, and conducts a circulating library. It has a lure hard to resist. A phonograph record exchange is also in operation.

The pretties that are finding their settings in the gift shop at the left-hand entrance to the court promise great allurements. It opened formally Thursday.

A neighbor of all of these mentioned is Joseph Goldberg, who is handling the appliances made by Dr. William M. Scholl for the cure of foot troubles. He calls himself the "foot comfort specialist" and will probably have plenty of patrons.

La Facile Corset Shop across the way, is a harmonious reception room which does not require much space, because no large stock is carried. The corsets are made to order to suit individual measurements taken by Alice White Anderson, the interesting woman who is establishing the business. For years she has been in the employ of private surgeons and hospitals in taking measurements for abdominal supports and other surgical appliances of like character. She enjoys that remedial work, but also is interested in the dress corset made on rational lines. Associated with her is the milliner, Josephine Des Mazes, who has had many years of experience in Los Angeles as a trimmer for the more exclusive shops. She does her own designing and will make a specialty of remodeling.

CHRISTIAN LADIES HOLD MEETING

The Ladies' Aid of the Central Christian church held its regular business meeting yesterday afternoon at the church. There were about 125 ladies present.

During the meeting plans were made for raising money for fixing up the old bungalow as a workroom for the Aid.

Helen was the daughter of Zeus, the great Greek god, and the wife of Menelaus of Sparta. She was the most beautiful woman in Greece, and was indirectly the cause of the Trojan war. She was carried off by Paris, the son of Priam, of Troy, it being claimed that the goddess of love, Aphrodite, had much to do with persuading her to leave her husband, Menelaus. After the death of Paris she married his brother, whom she later betrayed when Troy was captured by the Greeks. She then returned to Sparta with Menelaus and lived happily with her original husband until their death.

Deposits of talc comparing favorably with the highest grade French mineral have been discovered in Manchuria, associated with magnesite.

Mrs. Shives Mitchell and babies, who have been guests of Mrs. Ella Richardson of North Brand boulevard, left Thursday night for their home in King City. Mrs. Mitchell was a dinner guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Mitchell, Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Henrietta Lichtig of Chicago, sister of Dr. Kate Black of Verdugo road, is her guest and will be here for a month or more. This is the seventh trip Mrs. Lichtig has made to Southern California without succumbing to its lure and location here, which shows that Chicago has charms.

Miss Alice Calhoun, Vitagraph star, her mother, and Mr. Joseph Carl of New York, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Howe, of Glendale, Thursday evening.

Dr. Laura J. Brown is expecting her brother, his wife, and their son, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Brown, and Jack Brown, of Kansas City, Mo., who will arrive here either today or tomorrow. The Browns are motoring through the Yellowstone and down the coast and will stop here for a short while before they continue on their way down the coast.

Mr. Harry E. White, of 600 North Jackson street, returned early in the week from a 4-day trip to Antelope valley. Mr. White was on business in the north.

Miss Clara Pollock of 115 Arden entertained at luncheon on Tuesday, in honor of Miss Helen Beach.

Mr. John D. Cole, of 122 Arden, left today for a 10-day business trip through the east. He plans to visit New York, Chicago, and other large cities en route.

Mrs. James C. Person was the inspiration for a surprise birthday dinner last Tuesday evening, at the Person home, at 2150 Kenneth road. Fourteen immediate relatives, enjoyed the affair. Pink and white was the color scheme carried out in the dainty table appointments.

Mrs. R. E. Retts, of 230 West Colorado, leaves tomorrow for a few days' visit with her mother-in-law, at Topanga canyon, where the latter has a cabin. Later, Mrs. Retts and her daughter, Aurine, better known as "Chubby," will make a trip to San Diego and Coronado. Also, Mrs. Retts is considering going to Toledo, Ohio, this fall, for a trip. Her daughter will accompany her, according to present plans.

Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Percey and daughters, Leone and Lois Percey, of Sunland, are enjoying a pleasant vacation at Long Beach. They have rented a bungalow there and will not return to their ranch until the first of September. The boys, Cecil and Roland, spend the weekends at the beach.

WOULDN'T OCCUR AGAIN

A certain young woman, famous for her philanthropy, used to take an interest in the various lunatic asylums. On one occasion, during a visit to one of them, she evinced great interest in an elderly man whom she saw strolling about the grounds.

"How long have you been here?" she asked him.

"Twelve years," came the reply. After a few more questions as to his treatment there she passed on.

Turning to ask a question of her guide, she noticed a smile on his face, and on asking him the reason she was informed that the man she had questioned was no less a person than the medical superintendent.

At once she rushed back to apologize.

"I am so sorry, doctor," she said. "This has taught me a lesson—never to judge by appearances again."—Chicago Herald.

JUST LIKE A WOMAN

Theodore Dreiser, the novelist, said at a tea in Greenwich Village: "Criticism is a lot of work. The average critic understands the work he criticizes about as well as—"

"But here's a story. A woman was going through a picture exhibition with her husband. They came to a picture called 'Saved,' which represented a dripping Newfoundland dog standing over a foundling and unconscious child that he had just rescued from the river flowing in the background.

"The woman was deeply interested in this picture. She said:

"No wonder the poor child fainted after dragging that great big dog out of the water."—Los Angeles Times.

The invention is claimed by a German of a device that indicates the presence of metals or water in the ground, radiations from them affecting a needle floating on a liquid.

The Littlest Hang-Bird

By JOHN BRECK

The Tom-Tit's name comes often to your tongue if you read English poetry. The little Bush-Tit comes often to your eye if you live west of the Rocky Mountains, but his self-effacing ways do not suggest him as a topic for conversation. He is quiet in dress, a wee, gray figure of a bird, with just a tinge of sun-burn on his sides. He is quiet in voice, with a catch like a hissing and querulous grasshopper. Curiosity is his keynote. He wants to know absolutely everything that goes on underneath the leaves, and a good deal outside of them. If you chase him from one bush to the next he invariably turns around to peer out at you again. And industrious!

Talk about the industry of Jenny Wren! Sally Bush-Tit has enough for three of her. Her nest is a real work of art—a long, gray pocket of felt, made from every material a bird can weave with—mosses, grass, hair, long threads of fibre triumphantly pulled from winter-leached palm leaves, or gleaned from other sources, only bird ingenuity knows. And feathers, of course, both in the felt and in the lining of it. It is big, three times too big for a bird. She likes her luxury, she does. She wants room for a good, thick mattress of oat catkins. She wants her eggs where the grabby paw of a squirrel cannot reach in. She has another trick to circumvent him. Her entrance is not from the top, like the orioles, but through a little bottleneck set in the side, which pinches shut with her weight, after she settles down. But that is not all her craft. Tiny as she is—and milligram for milligram, most of the hummingbirds would outweigh her, since she is mostly tail—she has the wits of a crow. She slings her hammock where the twig-tips are so fine they would hardly give safe foothold for a mouse, distributing its weight among two or three of them. And she is best satisfied when there is water running beneath them. That gets on squirrel nerves, and soothes her own. Besides, she loves an occasional splash.

She is no close sitter. She knows what many poultrymen have yet to learn—that a moist shell makes easy hatching. When her house gets stuffy with the noonday sun shining upon it, she has no compunctions about departing. Here is no open basket with all the breezes of heaven blowing across it to chill her eggs. She has a sociable time, a cooling dip, and then that comfortable, dark nest for her sista. Her only problem is what to do with that long tail. Where does it go, unless she cocks it about her ears? But she'd have no trouble over a trifle like that—a bird of her ingenuity!

Electrical apparatus that has been invented for launching life boats from ships first lifts them clear of their chocks, then turns the davits around and finally lowers them.

ARM BAND IS SIGN OF NEWLY FREED HEART INTEREST IN EAST

Signal That Once Devoted Suitor Has Departed and Wearer Is at Liberty to Receive Other Attentions

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—At the coming-out reception of one of society's prettiest buds, one of the younger guests appeared in a gown of white crystal beaded crepe with a band of brilliant red chiffon tied about her left arm. On being questioned as to the significance of the arm band she coyly explained that when a girl has been going about with a young man for some time without actually being engaged, the other eligible young men steer out of her way. In other words, they leave the field to the victor. Then, if the said young man stops haunting her footsteps, the poor girl is left flat in the cold world without any boy friends to fall back on. Hence the red chiffon armlet. Sort of a "come on it, the water's fine" idea.

Either we must adopt daily setting-up exercises to keep the figure trim enough to wear the new wrap-around gowns, or we must again resort to the hip stay. A well-known physical instructor advises that we follow the "bend or burst" slogan and unless we bend at least 30 times each day we will certainly look as though we were bursting out of the new tightly draped models.

The last year of corsetless comfort has proven that in pine cases out of the ten figure has suffered an enlargement of the waist and of the abdomen. Unless we are willing to give a few minutes each day toward counteracting obesity, we will undoubtedly have to resort to corsets. The following "bend or burst" exercise will, if faithfully applied, put the figure in perfect condition.

With the hands on the hips, revolve from the waist in wide, circular motion thirty times. When commencing this exercise it is best not to try it all at one time, but to take ten rotations from the waist three times each day. This simple exercise is one of the best that is known for waist reducing.

In the bending exercise, place the hands high over the head and with knees held rigid bend until the fingertips touch the toes. By using this thirty times each day

ECONOMIC WASTE OF DESTROYING STREET TREES

Palms Which Give Place to Pavements Should Find Asylum in Parks

We permit ourselves fearful economic waste and perhaps it is fortunate we do not grieve too much about it for life has trouble enough anyway. But lovers of trees, whether they believe that trees think or not, feel a pang when they see needlessly destroyed, a tree which has been nourished for many years. That has happened to a good many palms along the business thoroughfares of Glendale, which had become old enough to be stately trees. If one bought them in a nursery they would be expensive luxuries. The very cost of moving and replanting puts them beyond the reach of the average citizen, but the city has trucks, laborers and parks wherein they could be planted and from this time on they ought not to be sacrificed. The average palm will stand a great deal of hardship and recover from transplanting if given half a chance.

The Parisians are at last divorcing themselves from their beloved black. Pastel colors, however, seem to have preference over the more brilliant tones.

the abdomen will soon become reduced.

The most noticeable style change on Fifth avenue is the appearance of the long skirt. The skirt question has been hashed and rehashed during the past few months until one is entirely disgusted with the whole skirt business. Nevertheless we must wear them and wear them long, if we are to follow the dictates of Dame Fashion.

From the recent appearance of the models and the fashionably gowned women we might think that the sale purpose of the long skirt is to lessen the burden of the "white wings" for long points and train-like side panels sweep the avenue as these ladies glide along. These first long skirts are stretched tightly about the body without fullness or gathering of any sort, except where they are caught in draped effect at the left hip. Most of them show little or no stocking. It is interesting to watch their effect upon the feminine passers-by.

Girls with lovely legs snicker and pass on with noses erect. Girls less fortunate in neither portions hurry homeward to add long points of chiffon to their knee length gowns so that they may fool their points the next day. Portly matrons rush happily to their modistes. It's a leg war and the bows, leans, and bandys seem to be winning out.

FALL PREPARATION FOR WINTER GARDENS

Not Too Soon to Think of Bulbs, Bedding Plants and Seeds

Though midsummer heat is still with us, even in lovely Glendale, the shortening days and cooler nights give warning that fall is coming and stimulates the flower lover to make plans for fall and winter gardens. It is not too soon to anticipate, and half the pleasure of planning is anticipation, for one's hopes are seldom entirely realized. Like agriculture in general it is a great gamble in which one gains the capital prize just often enough to spur to continued endeavor. Gardening, like virtue, is its own reward, but the reward comes often in visions.

Bulbs are one of the first things to think about. They are reasonably sure speculations if one can protect from gophers. Some gardeners accomplish that by planting them in baskets made of fine meshed wire which the rodents cannot penetrate though the soil and moisture can.

In this climate gladioli can be planted any month in the year and these have been so improved in size and variety of color that if one planted nothing else, he would have a fine show, and it could be made continuous by successive plantings.

Iris is another thing which has been wonderfully developed by the importation of varieties native of other countries and by cross breeding. With some flower devotees, iris gardens have become a cult. These bulbs should be planted before the first of December and not later than January first as many of the varieties are early bloomers.

October, November and December are the months named for the planting in this latitude of tulips, hyacinths, narcissi, jonquils, etc.

If one desires hardy annuals for winter blooming and is willing to give the time and trouble to the production of plants, seed sowing can begin even in August. The Antirrhinum (snapdragon) is an old-fashioned favorite, which has been developed to a wonderful degree, particularly in the giant sorts which come in white, yellow, pink and deep maroon, and are very lovely with a comparatively long blooming season. Stocks are another unfailing joy, provided one secures choice colors. The annual larkspur, sown broadcast, will make a rosy cloud if the pink variety is chosen, but it also can be had in white and shades of blue. More showy and beautiful is the tall perennial, in both light and deep blue, and which will reproduce itself from year to year if encouraged and given a chance. Many of the annuals of the east become perennials here and continue throwing up blossom stalks instead of perishing when the first spikes of bloom have become seed. Such an one is the scabiosa or "Mourning Bride" of great grandmother's day, though she might not recognize the lovely descendant of her garden dweller. If kept from producing seed it will bloom for many weeks and after you have thought it was through forever, you will discover it has been resting and with the first warm days of winter or late spring, will renew its growth and blossoming.

Pansies need no advocates, but with these as well as the other plants mentioned, the effort should be to get choice varieties. Gardening is not easy work and it cannot be made to pay in satisfaction if the results are second rate. For this reason many people prefer to incur the extra cost of plants already grown, to the labor and delay of raising seedlings.

Fortunately, our city has an establishment in the Glendale Plant and Floral company, where bedding plants in green variety can be secured, as well as shrubs, bulbs, seeds, etc. Their seed beds have already been started and the plants will soon have gone through the process of pricking out, transplanting and hardening for transfer to other gardens.

Glendale is becoming a flower "mecca" community and not in a "faddy" sense, but rather the rational enjoyment of beauty-loving people, who have not lost their contact with mother earth.

ARTISTIC WORK IN MR. SHERROD'S WINDOW DISPLAY

Mr. Sherrod of the Sherrod Shop, East Broadway, was a professional window dresser for a good many years and has never lost his love for composition of that kind. It is the creative work which calls for the instincts of an artist. Now that he has a shop of his own he is doubly interested in making his window display distinctive. Wednesday he had a charming black and red composition. Every day is different, so it is well worth one's while to pass that way.

He is just opening a "correct sports wear department" for women, featuring novel one-piece dresses, coat suits, sweaters, sport blouses, scarfs, etc. It is a line handled only by specialty shops and comes direct from the manufacturers in New York. Through his connection with a syndicate Mr. Sherrod is able to have the services of a buyer to select goods for him that he may make frequent importations and thus keep his stock up to the minute.

MRS. JOHN WHITE PLANNING THE POPULAR FAD IS COLLEGE GIRL'S WARDROBE

Leaves Family in Hermosa; Comes to Glendale for Mystic Rites

When Mrs. John Robert White wants to sacrifice to the gods of the orchards and vineyards, she leaves her loving family in Hermosa and comes to Glendale, where she can withdraw from the world in her roomy kitchen and perform the mystic rites of canning and preserving, undisturbed by the world.

It takes a lot of jam and jelly to fill up her days and she has need to concentrate, she says. In her jelly making she uses the pectin test. If the fruit juice coagulates when dropped into alcohol, she knows it does not need measure for measure of sugar; that she can use 2 cups of sugar to three of juice; she has never had any syrupy jelly yet.

Another thing she has learned about jelly making is to use a jelly bag of cotton flannel. It is a great time saver as the user can squeeze as hard as she likes. Mrs. White says, and only the clear juice will go through; there will be no trouble about cloudy jelly. It is a tedious process to follow the old method and let the juice drip slowly from the corner of a cheese cloth bag without squeezing. A little lemon juice will bring out the pectin in over-ripe fruit.

Another thing which Mrs. White has been making to tempt the appetites of the aforementioned boys is apricot marmalade. Here, too, she has learned a lesson that means time saving. She does not pare the fruit, but cuts it open to remove pits after it has been thoroughly washed, and then chops the fruit to a hash, skins and all, and places it over the fire in a big aluminum kettle with no water, except what has remained from the washing. After the sugar has been added and the cooking process has been completed, there is no trace of skin and the flavor of the product is improved. Modern doctors would consider it an advantage because of the vitamins saved. It is as beautiful as it is delicious, as it becomes clear in the cooking.

THE ART OF FLOWER ARRANGEMENT IN JAPAN

Beginning in Devotion to Sun Goddess Has Been Followed Generations

In Japan the art of flower arrangement has reached a perfection unknown in this country. It began as a form of devotion to the goddess of the sun and has been practiced for many generations. It has its limitations, however, being modified by custom and the prescription of certain flowers regardless of their beauty.

The Japanese studies the plant as a whole and in his use of it aims to bring out the beauty of leaf and stalk as well as bloom. He also strives to reveal the character of the plant which cannot be done when blooms are massed. This explains his use of but few flowers, and his reluctance to combine flowers.

FASHION HINTS

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—The newest dresses have skirts that are draped tightly about the figure and caught at the left side by an ornament or buckle from which long draperies hang almost to the floor.

The short woman and the young girl will find that the long skirts are not suitable to them as they tend to make them appear squat. By wearing the medium length skirt and using long panels or drapes, they can achieve the long silhouette without appearing grotesque.

Black satin slippers studded with jet and steel nailheads are worn with the all black dinner gown.

Some women believe that elephants bring them luck. They will want one of those charming gowns that are embroidered in the oriental design using the elephant as the most dominant note. A gown of black silk crepe has a wide border of tan embroidery which consists of motifs of elephants and trees. There is a faint outline of red running throughout the pattern.

Black lace over silver cloth or over old gold metallic cloth promises to be one of the foremost dancing types for winter.

Chrysanthemums are making ready for their crop of bloom and should be kept well watered. Side buds should be nipped from plants which one desires to limit to large, terminal blooms. Fertilizers may

COLLEGE GIRL'S WARDROBE

Sport Clothes Are Good Form for Everyday School Wear

All too soon the college lads will begin packing their old kit bags and the girls their trunks for the trip to Stanford, Berkeley or some other school, for the summer vacation is almost gone.

Mother's problem is the wardrobe for the girl, particularly if she is going as a freshman. Fortunately a goodly part of it can consist of sport clothes, which will be distinctly good form for every day school wear. This means sweaters and a variety of blouses or tailored shirts of habutai or other blouse silks, these, of course, to be worn with sport skirts, either the plain, straight and comparatively narrow skirt of tweed or kindred mixtures, or harder finished cloths in plaid; and stripes adapted to side or box pleats.

The outfit must include a top coat which may be of the popular English mixtures that are considered very smart. Low heeled shoes are correct with school costumes of this order and wool stockings will continue to be worn when the weather will permit.

There should be a bright scarf for picturesque draping as well as service.

For formal dress the tailored suit with a smart tailored hat is the suitable attire now as always.

Of silk gowns there should be one dark one—blue and black are the popular shades now—for afternoon wear, and one or more evening dresses of chiffon or silk crepe with which silver slippers and stockings can be worn. A pretty summer, lingerie dress or two will not come amiss as a party resource. The warm bathrobe must not be forgotten, nor the kimona.

REHEARSING OF LITTLE FOLKS IN TABLE MANNERS

Wise Mother Entertains Children With Formal Luncheon Often

As a method of teaching her children company manners, one mother occasionally entertains them with a formal luncheon, at which everything is served in courses. All the special knives, forks and spoons are brought out as for an elaborate dinner party that they may become so accustomed to their use that they will never be confused. Quite a point is made of conversation also, matters of general interest to them being discussed and all the children encouraged to express themselves. This mother believes that an ounce of practice is worth a pound of preaching, and that experience is the best teacher. The results seem to justify her theories.

The hydrangea can be easily rooted by putting a cutting in earth which can be kept moist and well shaded at least part of the time. Many people secure blue blooms by planting old nails or iron filings around the plant which causes some chemical change.

Bulbous plants, like Freesias and narcissi, whose tops have entirely died down, can be lifted and packed away in dry earth. Those which are desired for early winter blooming should be planted soon.

Oleanders are easily grown from cuttings. Put them in bottles filled with water and set in a shady place. Before long the white rootlets can be seen. The same treatment can be given fuchsia cuttings, which are also easily rooted.

"I don't understand," said Mrs. Fusswig, "what that man from the grocer's is doing at the back door so much. He always comes after dinner."

"He doesn't!" flashed back the good-looking cook. "He comes after me."

Johnson had obtained work in railway yard and was told to make some trucks.

"Here's a piece of chalk," said the foreman. "Mark each of 'em eleven."

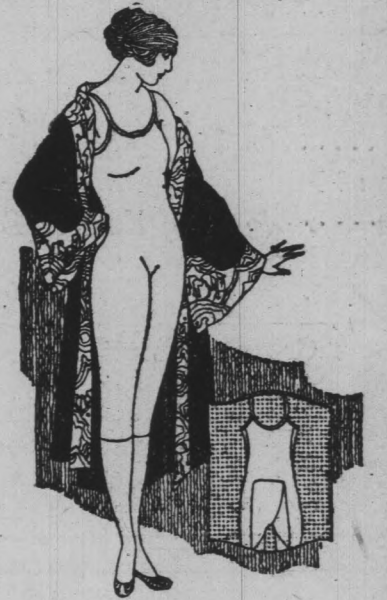

A little later the foreman came around again to see how the new hand had been getting on. I found him sitting on a bucket regarding a truck thoughtfully. Marked upon it was a large "L."

"What does this mean?" asked the foreman. "Only one truck dot and the number wrong at that. I'll know," said Johnson; "but couldn't think which side of the 'L' the other 'L' goes."

At a council school in England new pupil presented himself to the teacher. He answered the questions as to his name and age satisfactorily.

Then the child was asked: "Where were you born?" "I wasn't born at all," he said. "I got a stepmother."

HARDWARE MAN IS HOME FROM HIS VACATION

James Webb Returns
From Holiday On Catalina Island

James Webb of the Glendale Hardware Store has just returned from his vacation spent at Catalina Island. He said yesterday that he had a fine time on his trip and enjoyed every minute spent on the island. He was pleased to find, on his return, that business at the Glendale Hardware Store is excellent.

"Business is good," he said yesterday, "the vacation season is cutting down the trade in small articles and counter sales, but our building supply department is busy and the delivery trucks are pressed for time."

Mr. Webb is of the opinion that while there are not so many homes being built in Glendale at present those that are under construction are of the higher type.

Mr. Webb attributes this erection of higher class buildings than were constructed last year to two things: First, the passing out of existence of the fly-by-night contractor who erected cheap buildings only, and second, the fact that property in Glendale has increased in value to such an extent that the property owners are not willing to cheapen their property by erecting low-class buildings.

He said: "Property owners are seeing the folly of erecting a $1000 house on a $3000 lot and expecting a return on their investment."

He said that there are not so many bungalows being built at present. Their place is being taken in the construction game by the larger structures. These structures are all of first-class design and construction. Nothing but quality material is being used. Mr. Webb says that this will tend to steady the building industry and all subsidiary business to a marked degree.

STRONG CHURCHES MARK GROWTH OF GLENDALE

Exert Strong Influence on Current Thought and Activity in City

By BARBARA MILLER

Is the church exerting less influence today than it did a generation ago? This much discussed question might well be answered by an investigation of the churches and church activities of the "home town."

Glendale, which has, up to the present moment, a population of approximately 30,000, has seventeen churches within her boundary lines. Nearly all of the dominant sects are represented in this list: Central Avenue Methodist Episcopal, Central Christian, Church of the Brethren, First Baptist, First Church of Christ, Scientist; First Congregational, First Lutheran, First Methodist Episcopal, Glendale Presbyterian, Holy Family Catholic, Pacific Avenue Methodist Episcopal, Seventh-day Adventist, Saint Mark's Episcopal, Tropic Presbyterian, Lutheran Mission, Christian and Missionary Alliance, and the Home of Truth. Yes, "the old, old religion" and the newer branches which have grown up in later years are to be found here.

Perhaps one of the most far-reaching ways in which the church today influences the community is through the children, and an important branch of this work with the young people is the vacation Bible school. A number of Glendale churches held such schools this summer, among them being the Glendale Presbyterian, the Central Christian, and the Tropic Presbyterian. Two Eagle Rock churches, the Presbyterian and the Methodist, also held such sessions.

The general plan was that the schools should be open five days a week, during the morning hours.

Bible study, conducted in such a way as to appeal to the younger mind, singing, stories, craftwork, and directed recreation were offered in the course. These schools are absolutely free and a welcome is given to every child who wishes to attend. The first summer work of this type was given four or five years ago, and the number of such schools has been increasing steadily ever since.

At the close of the session, exercises were held to show what had been accomplished during the summer. These were most interesting, and a conclusive proof of the value of the work. At the Central Christian church it was stated that the average cost per pupil for the entire time was $2.50, the amount being paid by the church.

The young people's societies and the women's organizations of the various churches reach an increasing number of people. The ladies' aids and missionary societies meet at all-day sessions, with luncheon served at noon. Sewing is done, either for charities or on articles to be sold and the money given to the church. At other meetings, the entire time is devoted to pleasure, thus strengthening the bonds between groups of congenial women who are better able to work together, as they have played together.

Ladies of the Holy Family Catholic church recently gave a most successful lawn fete at the home of Miss Emma Brosseau, on Vine street. A large crowd attended, making the affair a success from both the social and the financial standpoints.

Despite adverse opinion, the people of today still pause to pay tribute to faithful church workers. An example of this was the case of Mrs. Fate Farnum, who, a short time before her death was presented with an honor medal by the Sunday school board of the Central Methodist church, of which her son-in-law, Rev. V. Hupner Brink, is pastor.

Mrs. Farnum had taught Sunday school classes for 44 years, beginning in the work at the age of 15. Six former members of her classes have entered the ministry. The First Lutheran church recently celebrated the beginning of its sixth year of existence. This time has seen a remarkable growth, especially in the strength and interest of the Lutheran League for young people and in the ladies' guild. It is planned that an addition will be built to the church, where parlors will be located which will accommodate both of these thriving organizations.

The Pacific Avenue Methodist Episcopal has instituted a popular custom, that of "social night," which is given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid. A silver offering is taken and the money goes for needed church expenses, such as recently, a new carpet. The J. O. C. class of this church is very active, and has a large attendance of interested young people. Pianos, and enjoyable socials, are regularly given by the members of this section. A short while ago 15 young people from the San Pedro church presented an interesting pageant, "The Challenge of the Cross." This was attended by a large audience, the presentation being open to all.

The drive for a permanent rectory at St. Mark's Episcopal was successful, for over $4000 was raised in the allotted time. The new rectory will be called in the near future. The Ladies' Guild has been active of late, with a number of all-day meetings and social affairs.

"The Twilight Communion Service" at the Glendale Presbyterian is always well attended. This is held at 6 o'clock and all visitors, of which a number regularly take advantage of the invitation, are welcomed to the service. "S. O. S." or, being translated, "Save Our Sabbath," has been the recent subject of the pastor. It was at this church, known as "The Church of the Lighted Cross," that during the vacation school session the children were encouraged to memorize the hymns which they sang each morning. Who can tell of the in-

BANNER WEEK IS EXPERIENCE OF HARDWARE CO.

Builders' Hardware and Supply Store Makes
Record in Sales

"Last week was the best that we have ever had since opening our store here," said G. C. McConnell of the Builders' Hardware and Supply company. "If business keeps up the way it is at present next fall will be the best season for the hardware business of my experience."

M. McConnell said that according to the purchases made in his store the people of Glendale are building better type homes than ever before. "I am in a position to know about what type buildings are being erected as I sell both builders' hardware and paint," he said.

He said that the fly-by-night contractor of the past few years is passing out and his place is being filled by reliable contractors, who are skillful artisans and give the owner value received for every dollar paid him. The fact that buildings are not being built in such quantities at present as during the past year is offset by the fact that the homes and business blocks constructed today are of higher class. The owner is either doing the contracting himself or is placing the work with contractors who have proven to be men of integrity and ability.

Mr. McConnell said that business is so good at present that it looks as if he will not have a chance to take a vacation at all this year.

GREGG HARDWARE STARTS BANKEE SAVING PLAN

Coupons Amounting to
Two Per Cent Discount
Given for Cash

The D. L. Gregg hardware store has installed the Bankeer system of saving. With every purchase of 10 cents or more a Bankeer coupon is given the purchaser. These coupons are placed in a book. When the book is filled it is the equivalent to $50 and can be cashed at the Security Trust and Savings bank for $1. This amounts to a 2 per cent discount.

This system of discounting is sold only to one merchant in every line in a town. It is practically a new idea in merchandising.

Mr. Gregg said: "The Bankeer system has as its primary idea the encouraging of thrift among children. It is the practice of many people who are patronizing stores using this system to give the completed books to the children of the family. When the book is cashed it forms the nucleus of a savings account. The banks cashing these books urge and advise that the refund be used to start a savings account. It does not take long to fill a book with these coupons. Every purchase carries its Bankeer and it is an easy matter for the average family to fill one or more of these books each month."

INDUSTRIAL DISPLAY

Eight counties of the south part of the state are preparing agricultural exhibits for the Southern California fair which will be held October 10 to 15 at Riverside, and practically every community of Riverside county will display its best farm products. The U. S. department of agriculture will have a large exhibit and the state agricultural department is also preparing a fine display of the work in various divisions. ## U. OF C. COURSES POPULAR WITH FARMERS

Correspondence Agricultural Instruction Makes Hit

Farmers of California are showing great interest in the correspondence course in agriculture offered by the University of California, according to H. M. Butterfield, of the division of Agricultural Education. In 1921-22 farmers registered for courses formed 37 percent of the total number enrolled as compared with 27 in 1920-21.

The correspondence courses in agriculture have been greatly improved by the university during the past year, three new courses in peach and cherry culture and apiarian management having been added. The courses in poultry husbandry and walnut culture have been entirely revised and two new courses in berry culture and farm cost accounting are being prepared. An increased enrollment for this work is expected during the coming year.

C. & S. ENJOYS GOOD BUSINESS

The C. & S. cafeteria on North Brand boulevard, has been enjoying an exceptionally good run of business for the summer season, according to the popular manager, Mrs. Stocker.

"Many tourists are coming to Glendale, and the first place they look up is a cafeteria," said Mrs. Stocker. "We can tell the strangers for they never fail to ask us about Glendale, and we make it a point to do all the boasting we can."

We are endeavoring to give the Glendale public good service, by furnishing the best market affords in a good variety, well cooked and served in an appetizing manner." Mr. J. T. Stewart, owner of the C. & S. cafeteria, had unbought faith in Glendale's growth and especially the north end, when he built a modern cafeteria building designed especially for the cafeteria business. His enterprise has occasioned much favorable comment and the C. & S. cafeteria should have a good patronage.

MUSEUM IS HOST TO WAR MOTHERS

The officers of the County War Mothers entertained the different chapters yesterday with a silver tea at the Southwest museum of Los Angeles.

Frances Hedley, educational secretary, gave a very interesting talk on the conditions of the museum and the manner in which specimens are secured for display. The habits of butterflies and the different species and the manner in which they are caught was very interestingly given by one of the superintendents of the museum.

Those from the Lester Meyer chapter at Glendale attending were Mrs. L. T. Rowley, Mrs. Wells, Mrs. J. M. Cowlin, Mrs. Nichols, Mrs. Rose and Mrs. Butler.

Population of Canada in 1867 was 3,000,000; in 1921 it was 8,746,872.

DETAILED REPORT OF THE ACTION OF THE HIGH SCHOOL BOND ISSUE MASS MEETING

How the Citizens Arrived at the Resolutions Supporting the Trustees and Sustaining R. D. White in Junior High School Organization

By GERTRUDE GIBBS
The meeting at the high school Thursday night to consider recommendations of high school trustees relative to calling a bond issue for $350,000 to purchase a high school site in the northwest, the balance to be used for the completion of the high school to be built on Verdugo road, also the question of organizing junior high schools throughout the district, came nearer to being a MASS meeting than any similar gathering that has taken place for some time.

It demonstrated, however, that although Glendale has trebled its population in four years, having now, according to Judge Lowe, 30,000 people, it still has a long way to go before it can claim consideration as a real city.

As an exposition of jealousy, of suspicions that were an insult to the officials against who they were directed, as an airing of petty local prejudices unworthy of the districts whose sentiments they were supposed to voice, as a childish waste of time in hair-splitting debate, the meeting could only be characterized by some others of like character that have been held in the past, which the saner element present hoped we had outgrown.

The recommendations of the high school trustees were adopted by a decisive vote after weary debate on the original motion made by H. V. Henry, on the amendments and amendments to amendments by addition, insertion, substitution, etc., an effort to divide the two propositions so that electors could vote separately for the northwest site and additional funds for the east side buildings, which was precipitated by an amendment to that effect offered by Rudolph Streit, the amendment being lost by a standing vote of 93 against to 67 for, according to the count of two tellers.

By this time the weary audience of disinterested voters seeking the welfare of the schools, had little animation left for the consideration of the half dozen or more sites on which the board has secured options, or for the question of reorganization of the school system by the establishment of junior high schools in the communities now being served by Glendale union high school, viz., Eagle Rock, La Crescenta, Tujunga, Glendale, etc.

The meeting was called to order by Thomas D. Watson, president of the high school board of trustees, who read the call for the meeting, as published elsewhere in this paper, and then called for nominations for a permanent chairman.

James M. Rhoades was nominated by Judge Lowe, and Dr. Jessie E. Runyon by Alexander Mitchell. Mr. Rhoades gallantly withdrew his name in favor of the doctor, who was called to the platform and presented with the gavel. She explained that the sole province of a chairman was to maintain order, and that she would much prefer to be in the talking ranks on the floor.

On motion of W. B. Kelly that a vice chairman be appointed to rule when an appeal was taken from the ruling of the chair, J. C. Sherer was elected to the office, but when called upon late in the evening, left the matter to the vote of the assembly instead of assuming responsibility.

John C. Austin, architect, was called upon for an explanation of why additional funds were needed for the east side plant, and why it would be economical for the rapidly growing district to provide for an attendance of 2500 students instead of building a plant which would be outgrown before it was completed. In the debate which followed it was stated that no city with a population less than 60,000 could support two high schools.

A motion by W. D. Root that speakers be limited to 10 minutes, was amended to 5 minutes, and, thus amended, was adopted. There was no motion to limit the number of times any one person could speak to the question, and advantage of this was taken by one individual, who was recognized time after time by the chair, and who must have consumed close to an hour's time reiterating the things he had already said.

Mr. Shedd's amendments to the Henry motion that the board be "requested" instead of "instructed," and that the site which received a "plurality" vote instead of a "majority" vote, be selected, were adopted.

Rudolph Streit's amendment to divide the two propositions was supported by John J. Burn, J. R. Gray, Nathan Newby, A. T. Cowan and J. C. Sherer. Those who supported the trustees' recommendations that the two propositions be voted as one were Richardson D. White, Alexander Mitchell and Mr. Shedd, the chief argument raised being that the division of the vote brought about by local prejudice would result in the defeat of both propositions, which require a two-thirds vote to carry.

Mr. Gray offered a substitute amendment to the Henry motion that the trustees be instructed to call an election to vote bonds in the sum of $500,000 to purchase a high school site in the northwest, and to erect buildings thereon for the accommodation of the children of the district. This motion was lost before the final vote on the Streit amendment was taken.

As there was more or less talk about what disposition would be made of any surplus over and above $260,000, which might be left should one of the cheaper sites be selected, W. Q. Widdows offered an amendment to the Henry motion instructing the trustees to apply as much as might be necessary of the balance left after the purchase of a northwest site to the completion of the east side plant.

Mr. Brookmiller objected to tying the hands of the trustees by restrictive instructions, pointing tention of this concern to handle a line of high grade tires and tubes, which it can sell to the automobile tire user at wholesale prices; it will feature the Virginian tire in both cord and fabric. These tires are manufactured by the Virginian Rubber company, who bear a long reputation for manufacturing tires of the highest grade.

"The tires which will be handled" says Mr. A. C. Fangman, "will be only of the highest quality, the guarantee of which will be backed by both the manufacturer and ourselves. We will handle nothing but factory lines, which will be sold to the used at wholesale prices, or as near so as is consistent with good business policy. We will not handle any of the so-called 'gyp' lines, as there will be room only for tires of the highest quality on our shelves, and every tire sold by us will be backed by our personal guarantee, and our castiron policy will be to make good absolutely when the tire doesn't."

"We will feature the Virginian tire, but at the same time will handle some other brands. "In buying and shipping direct from the factory, we will be in a position to give the tire users of Glendale and vicinity a high grade tire at a price that has never before been attempted."

The location is one of convenience, being directly opposite the new postoffice. We are disappointed in not getting our entire opening stock, but have enough for our immediate need," Mr. Fangman said. "The stock is held up on account of the railroad strike."

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

A bathing beach is a place where people go in summer to scatter pickle bottles, orange skins, banana peels, shoeboxes, newspapers, magazines, eggshells, sandwich remnants and sardine cans.

Originally it was exclusively a bathing place. Today it has become a combination picnic ground, cabaret, burlesque show, chowder club base and Turkish bath.

All beaches, of course, are not alike. By their junk you shall know them. Some of them are immaculate, restful, cool and orderly. Try and find them!

At salt water resorts the tide comes in twice a day and takes out the debris left by the merry villagers. Twice a day is inadequate. Three trips of the tide have become an absolute necessity if the job is to be well done.

Sunday is the big day at the bathing beaches. Something like 234,567,890 men, women and children leave home early Sunday morning in flivvers, determined to rip off as many fenders as possible en route and to arrive at the seaside in time to open the first three-minute egg and deal the first salmon sandwich.

Popper, mommer and Eddie sit in the front seat. Ella, Sadie, Minnie, Janet, Mamie, Harry and Prentice sit in the rear. Anastasia, the 11-months-old baby is tenderly deposited on the floor and covered with thermos bottles, campstools, baseball bats, knives, bottle-openers and delicatessen goods.

There is nothing like a trip to

The Other Second—But no! It is very well for your principal to fire on mine at 30 paces, but mine, being near-sighted, should be allowed to stand closer to yours when the signal is given.

sock.
Popper looks into the flivver and discovers mommer unconscious. She has mistaken a tool bag for a one-piece suit and has been badly injured trying to get it over her head.

Sister Susie then causes a sensation by stepping out of the car with nothing on but a tire patch and three egg sandwiches.

They all have to climb back into the car and start over again. Finally, straightening things out, they decide it is too late to swim. So they dump the food on the beach and have a delicatessen orgy.

The ukelele is quite the rage at bathing beaches this season. All the bobbed-hair girls and the prep school boys bring their "ukes" and sit around committing assault and battery on Hawaiian love songs. Nothing makes a bum singer quite such a bum singer as a "uke." It is the sour tenor's delight.

Lifesavers are all right, but it seems so darn silly to rescue a person from drowning when it only means he will have to endure the ukelele players so much longer. It is an old saying that a "uke" player never drowns. He never goes into the water.

Chow dogs are another beach rage this year. Many bathers bring their dogs and parade the beach with them. The dogs look at the legs of people in bathing suits and go mad. They think they're in dog heaven; nothing but bones!

The Barton Bedtime Stories

SLYFOOT'S WIFE HAS CALLERS

As the red dog started home, hanging a thoughtful tail, Dr. Muskrat popped back into his hole to finish his sleep, for he guessed he'd need all his wits about him that evening. But he didn't guess the very creature they were on the lookout for was looking at them from the willows across the Pond. The crafty Mother Mink gave him plenty of time to get settled down before she crept to the water's edge. She slipped in without stirring a ripple, swam across, and climbed up the bank on the other side. She disappeared into Maltie Kitten's old hole.

"Yes, this certainly is the place for me," she nodded to herself, as she explored the long, dark tunnel clear up to Nibble Rabbit's at the other end. "I won't have to live in either of these nests. They're too public. I'll dig one for my kittens just half way between them. But I'm going to use them just the same. They'll hold all the earth I have to scoop out. I needn't poke a single crumb outside to show all over the woods, so any one who hunts for me will find every place but the right one. But the digging comes first.

"It's a wonderful hole," she grunted contentedly, as she shoved a great big pile of loose dirt down the tunnel ahead of her, just like you shove snow with a snow plow. "It has so much fresh air in it. Where can it be coming from? Now, that I've got this lower hole blocked, it can't all be blowing in at the other end. It— Her heart missed a beat. For she had found the little runway Miner Mole had dug into it. "Who made that?" she gasped. "It 'was a snake, it was a bigger one than I want to meet down here in the dark. I'll bet a mouse-tail that's why this fine place has been deserted!" Then "Fast!" she assured herself. "The Woodfolk would have caught him if it was. A stupid snake wouldn't last long around this Pond. He isn't smart enough to outwit them, like I can."

She widened the runway and tried to find where it came out. But she hadn't gone far when "Ow!" she sputtered. "There's an ant in my ear. I must be pretty near the grass-roots. Pss! I can't reach up to scratch it. This hole's too tight." Then she had a terrible time backing down into the tunnel again. She rubbed her hair all the wrong way and got tickly crumbs of dirt in it. She had to dash up into Nibble Rabbit's old nest before she could give herself a good hard shake and get all comfortable again. She was too busy with her scratching to pay attention to anything else. But when she stopped, she heard a voice just outside saying: "Yet, thith ith dess fere I comed, and that's dess fere I went in."

AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION DRAFTS LAWS

Preparing to Cover Many Points in Patent Chaos

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—The American Bar association is preparing drafts of laws to be presented to congress to untangle the present chaotic state of patent, trademark and copyright law. Reports on these subjects were made by a special committee investigating the law. The study of the question has taken over two years. The committee also reported that its efforts to have salaries of patent office employees raised had been successful, and had become law on February 18, 1922. An attempt will be made to codify and revise the patent statutes. The trade-mark law is declared to be in a particularly chaotic state. "The present federal statutory law of trade-marks is scattered through a number of acts of congress which are difficult to find. Anyone who has had occasion to read these statutes must be impressed with their obscurity. If, in an attempt to learn what they mean, one reads the cases in which they are interpreted and applied, bewilderment is increased because there is no reconciling the decisions. "Good will is often the most valuable asset that a trading establishment can have, and trade-marks are essentially symbols of business good will," the committee declared. Trade-marks are the essence of competition, because they make possible a choice between competing articles by the buyer. Trade-marks encourage the maintenance of quality by securing to the producer the benefit of a good reputation which excellence creates. To protect trade-marks, therefore, is to protect the public from deceit, to foster fair competition, and to secure to the business community the advantages of reputation and good will by preventing their diversion from those who have created them

The rotation field contains 22 different crop rotations. The winter wheat grown on land that had previously grown potatoes showed up so well that it caused special comment. The promise for yield on this plot was only exceeded slightly by that on the plot for winter wheat and summer fallow. In the variety tests many different commercial and hybrid varieties are growing in 1-40 acre plots side by side. The new hybrid variety produced by crossing Turkey Red, which is a winter variety, and Florence, which is a white spring variety recently produced at the experiment station, is completely resistant to smut. Members of the party carefully looked over this plot and were unable to find a single smutted head. Most other varieties grown under the same conditions contained at least a few heads of smut. This variety is being tested further, and it is hoped that it may be improved in its yielding qualities, after which it is proposed to distribute it for commercial planting.

Some women aren't so very pretty simply because they know how pretty they are. to those who have not. This is the end to which the proposed bill will be directed."

Vive Le Grotesque!

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc. (Copyright, 1922, by The Associated Newspapers.)

Ours is indeed an age wherein "Vive le grotesque!" is an insistent sentiment of large masses of the population. Multitudes eagerly, almost feverishly, quest for the extravagant, the absurd, the bizarre. They demand the grotesque in the theatre and the dance hall, in the art gallery, in the illustrations of their newspapers and magazines, in works of poetry and in works of prose.

Let a novelist concoct a tale of grotesque personages thinking and acting in grotesque ways, and at once he is acclaimed a man of genius. Almost overnight, with the excited aid of critics who ought to know a great deal better, he will find his preposterous creation among the "best sellers."

A painter has only to become a "cubist" or "futurist" to insure for himself an ardent following. It does not matter that he may be utterly devoid of technical skill, pathetically lacking in true artistic sense.

So long as he contrives to give people something to gape at, something to exclaim about, the mantle of true greatness will be said to be his inheritance. He may win his way to fame even by the simple device of painting zigzag lines on a canvas and labeling them "Love" or "Hate," "Fidelity" or "Treachery," as the fancy takes him.

And outside of art galleries, in the pictures of our daily and periodical press, public demand is compelling an even larger place for the grotesque. Some magazine editors even deem it necessary to cajole patrons into reading serious articles by sugar-coating these articles with illustrations that are gross caricatures.

The futuristic stage settings that have become the vogue in certain of our theatres, the ballets and semi-operas of weird imaging and costuming, the jazz dances that have ousted the graceful, beautiful waltzes—all these bear further witness to the popular passion for the grotesque. Go where one will, there is no escaping signs of it.

What, then, does it mean? Why is the grotesque so much in evidence? Is it merely a transitory phenomenon, of no significance?

If one could only answer "yes" to this last question. But, alas, remembering that the grotesque has been steadily gaining in favor since the days of the "Yellow Kid," a quarter of a century ago, one must hesitate to predict that the public will soon weary of it, must hesitate to say that their fervor for it means nothing in particular. There is reason to believe, there is reason to perceive in the popular demand for the grotesque a danger signal to be heeded by statesmen, educators, and all whose special business it is to help conserve the vigor and promote the welfare of the nation. But discussion of this in detail I must reserve for another day.

Flying to Be Retained. As Private Affair

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 11.—The committee on the law of aeronautics, the latest wrinkle of the American Bar association in keeping itself right up to the minute, has temporarily and perhaps permanently decided against an amendment to the Constitution of the United States giving exclusive jurisdiction over aeronautics to the federal government. The committee declared that no such amendment should be presented until congress has enacted legislation fostering and regulating aeronautics, and until the supreme court has determined the extent of federal control over aeronautics.

The committee urged that the Bar association co-operate with the federal and state authorities "to the end that governmental action may result which will tend to the development of aeronautics in the United States, thereby contributing to our national prosperity and strengthening our national defense."

The committee pointed to the necessity of aeronautic laws by citing a case which came up only this year—in re Reinhardt, 232 N. Y. 115—in which the question was whether a flying boat or hydro plane is subject to federal legislation with reference to employers' liability when moored upon navigable waters, or whether it is subject to state legislation.

A man entered a crowded railway carriage and placed a heavy book, almost a small trunk, on the parcels rack. A nervous passenger was sitting beneath, and after looking at the bulky package and fearing it would fall on him, said: "I say, do you think it's quite safe?" "Oh, yes," responded the owner cheerfully; "it's locked."

Truths in Epigram

It is impossible to please all the world and one's
father.—Fontaine
(1621-1695).

In their first passion women love their lovers,
in all others they love love.—
Rochefoucauld (1613-1680).

If the nose of Cleopatra had been shorter, the whole face of the earth would have been changed.—Pascal (1623-1662).

ABSENT FROM DUTY

Senator Johnson of California seems to have patterned after the model set by Hearst when the latter was a Tammany congressman from New York. Hearst seldom was present at roll call. Johnson seems to have been present only when it suited his convenience, and to have voted, or refrained from voting, as impulse, politics and legal engagements with his employer, Hearst, suggested.

As a senatorial absentee Johnson won a place close to the head of the list. In the sixty-seventh congress, out of a grand total of roll calls reaching 1288, Johnson answered 792. By thus refraining from the activities he had been chosen by California to perform, he managed to avoid committing himself on the Newberry matter, and the Esch-Cummins bill. This process is known as sidestepping. In relation to the Newberry case, Johnson made the excuse of having been detained by a blizzard. That must have been his personal "day of the big wind," no one else having observed it. The wind was in his mind, and now is being transmuted into speech.

During the second session of congress, Johnson was a little more careful to be on hand. The campaign for re-nomination had drawn appreciably nearer. He was not there enough, however, to promote the team work of the California delegation. That he led this delegation in regard to procuring a duty on citrus and kindred products was not the fact. The belief that he led it has been carefully nurtured by the democratic Hearst papers. For reasons that do not need to be explained, but that fail to appeal to California republicans, Hearst is demanding the nomination of his hired attorney. His measureless nerve in seeking to dictate to members of the party he opposes, has resulted in resentment that must injure the attorney.

When a senator is elected, he is elected to represent his state, and naturally to represent the principles of the party choosing him. A part of his duty is to do the work for which he is paid. He has no moral right to neglect this duty for the sake of Tammany fees or any other fees. Yet such neglect not only is charged against Johnson, but the allegation is proved from the official record of his senate career.

To recapitulate:

Total roll calls, 1288;
Present and voting, 792;
Absent and not voting, 496.

Meanwhile, plenty of time to defend Hearst against the accusation of stealing news; plenty of time to go to court as the counsel of Tammany.

ONE UNENVIABLE RECORD

Some student of municipal statistics is spreading the information that Los Angeles has far more than its proportionate share of violent crimes. Relative to size, it leads in murders, burglaries and robberies. In the matter of automobile accidents it is in a class by itself. Yet the indictment is not so black as it first appears. Los Angeles is today the most alive city in the United States. The quickness of its recent and continuing expansion is without precedent. It grows so that it presents an ever changing picture. While calling attention to the fact that it leads in certain regrettable particulars, it is fair to say that it also leads in growth, in enterprise, and that as to building, it ranks third among cities.

The conditions widely advertised naturally attract the adventurer. Individuals who live by their wits easily realize that to Los Angeles there is a steady stream of people of means. They join the stream. Arriving in the city they are at a sort of jumping-off place. They must do something, or retrace their steps. They have no desire to work. Thus in the midst of legitimate activities there is implanted a colony of the underworld. When criminals are arrested, as they are in great numbers, they are found not to be men desperate through lack of work, but men who are constitutionally opposed to personal labor. They are the riff-raff of a score of municipalities. They are low types of Mexicans from below the border, likely to have been driven north for their sins. They are drift from the ports of the seven seas. Los Angeles authorities are doing all they can to combat the tide of imported crime. They have a vast task. The offenders do not belong to this region, constitute no fixed social unit. They are present only as the concomitant of such material increase as Los Angeles has experienced, and by every inducement of the agencies of good order, are being urged to move on.

THE FOOL AND HIS MONEY

Separation of the fool and his money is a quick and easy process. It may be that a fortune will be expended recklessly in the effort to make a display. It may be that cupidity and stupidity combined dissipate it in a hurry.

At irregular, but frequent intervals, somebody complains to the police of having been swindled out of a huge sum. Often investigation shows the loser to have been as dishonest as the thief. A common form of the operation is the pretense by the swindler that he has come into possession of a large amount which he is under moral obligation to distribute to the poor. The person approached has been chosen as the proper agent to attend to the distribution. Of course he must put up security, the sum mentioned being the utmost that happens to be at his command. He does this with the thought that it is far less than the fortune about to be turned over to him. That is the last of it, except the permanent vanishing of the philanthropist and the security.

It is next to impossible to summon up sympathy for a person so lacking in intelligence as to become victim to a game that has been exposed times without number, and is in itself so clumsy that it could not deceive anybody having a thimbleful of brains. At the same time it is excessively irritating that a bunko person should be able to circulate among well-to-do morons and garner so easy a harvest. There is no help for it. Perhaps the experience may jar the slumbering mentality of the victim into action, so that he will avoid a second approach. But always there are others of his type.

It would seem to be about time for cessation of efforts to delude the aged into the belief that youth may be restored to them. Various methods are advertised without the slightest indication that any is of benefit. One man at eighty may be less active than another of equal years, but neither is a youth, and no surgery, dosage or incantation can recall the vanished state. Which taken altogether probably is no valid reason for regret.

NO INDEPENDENCE WITHOUT FEDERATION

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Each century brings its war cry. Each generation emphasizes its own phase of progress.

In the days of the American revolution the formula was "No taxation without representation." That was the battle cry of freedom and the beginning of real democracy.

But it was not enough. Freedom is not enough. Liberty is a precious thing and worthy of the prayer "Give me liberty or give me death." But if all the people in any state have only personal liberty, it may easily spell anarchy, and a reversion to barbarism.

For the complement of liberty is co-operation. If each man is free and no man understands how to fit his freedom to his neighbor's freedom there results only the liberty of dogs and cats.

A great deal of passion has been set free in Ireland with the cry "For Ourselves Alone." The same thing is true in other countries. In Yugo-Slavia, for instance, the new state carved out after the war, that region called Croatia is a little Ireland. It is howling for independence quite as much as the Irish.

The same tendency is visible in India, where there is a growing demand for Home Rule. All these sentiments of self-determination are good as far as they go. But the welfare of a state depends quite as much upon its relation to other states as it does upon its independence.

The treaty makers at Versailles carved out a lot of new nations. In this they yielded to the impulse for freedom and national independence. Where they failed, however, was in providing a strong enough to hold all these new independentcies together.

They tried to make this kind of a tie by devising the League of Nations. But the trouble is that the world is still too child-minded, too immature, and moves too slowly in its thought to grasp the supreme necessity of co-operation among nations, and to realize that that is as vital a matter as independence.

Events, however, including poverty, bankruptcy, and general distress, are teaching the world what it could not learn academically. The nations are realizing that it is fully as important to have practical and vital connection with the other nations as it is to have political independence from them.

The two things are not incompatible. The idea of federation includes them both. For federation implies entire political liberty, which is not at all vitiated, but is rather strengthened by interstate union.

All the world needs is Americanizing. All that is necessary is to arrange the planet according to the model of the United States of America.

This may seem a hard job, but it not only can be done, but it has to be done.

Somehow or other the two great ideas of Liberty and Law must be married. For them to keep apart is an unnatural and dangerous celibacy.

The world is slowly working toward this. The Washington conference, the Gannes conference, and the Genoa conference are moves in this direction.

The patriotisms that are overheated in the crucible of war will have to cool sufficiently to be fused to the only amalgam which can endure forever—Humanity.

The world is growing up. It is still a bumptious boy, but there are signs of approaching manhood.

THE RIGHT WORD

By W. CURTIS NICHOLSON

GRAMMAR SIMPLIFIED

(For the Busy Man or Woman)

(Find the error in this article)

OFF OF—You take a pencil off (not off of) the desk; buy your meat from, or of, not off or off of the butcher. Drop the OF, and use OFF only, when the thing in question is taken from a resting position on an object; as, he brushed the dust off his coat; he got the book from his friend.

FROM WHEN—Use only WHEN, as, such is the place whence he came. Also, do not say: from hence; from thence; omit FROM.

ONLY—Place ONLY as near as possible the word, phrase, or clause it modifies; as, I know only one person to invite (not, I only know); I shall walk only to the head in the road (not, I shall only walk); only Harrison was present (Harrison was the only one present); Harrison said only that he was sorry he came (THAT HE WAS SORRY HE CAME was the only thing Harrison said).

AND WHICH (AND WHO, AND WHOM, AND THAT)—Do not write an AND WHICH clause unless it is preceded by another WHICH clause. Incorrect: This is a house replete with many spacious rooms, and which is comparatively inexpensive. The man just announced, and who is now speaking, will clear the mystery. Correct: This is a house, which is replete with many spacious rooms and which is comparatively inexpensive, or, This is a house, replete with many spacious rooms and comparatively inexpensive. The man who was just announced and who is now speaking will clear the mystery, or, The man just announced and now speaking will clear the mystery.

LISTENING POST

A badger and a porcupine lived in a field not far from each other.

And were good friends.

They exchanged greetings and held discussions and made each other gifts.

And passed many months without an unfriendly word.

Each had his place of abode.

Where he retired when he chose.

Lived his life as he saw fit.

And arose when he got ready.

And they met in the course of their daily pilgrimages.

Which were for the seeking of food mostly.

Just as our daily business is.

Mostly for the seeking of food.

Food and shelter and the things that go to make up life.

But in the life of an animal there is not such complexity as in that of a man.

He does not need gasoline and movie theaters and such things.

Nature attends to the business of clothing for him.

In winter she thickens his coat and gives him a winter dress.

And in summer she thins it and gives him a lighter garment.

So the concern of the animal is mostly for food and drink.

The badger and the porcupine grew more friendly each day.

And developed a fondness for each other that led to personal intimacy.

They sat down often on a furrow or near a tree and talked things over.

Exchanged ideas.

And one day the badger said to the porcupine:

"Why not live together? Why maintain two establishments?"

Then we could have a joint larder and share house rent and live more happily and economically.

To which the porcupine agreed.

And they set out to live in the same establishment.

"We will make a hole in the ground three times as big as either of us has now," said the badger.

So they remodeled the house.

Made it three times as big.

A roomy hole in the ground where each should have room in plenty.

"I did not know your tail was so bushy," said the porcupine the first morning after they started housekeeping.

"It tickled my nose all night."

"I never knew your quills were so sharp," said the badger.

"One of them got in my foot."

On the second morning they discovered something else about each other.

"You sprawl all over the place at night," said the porcupine.

"I can't find any room to sleep."

"You have a frightful snore," said the badger.

"You kept me awake till daylight."

And so it continued.

No longer did they meet on the furrow and talk things over.

Each went his own way through the day.

And each got home as soon as he could to get in the larder first and find the best place to sleep.

"It is funny," said the badger.

"We have three times as much room as either of us had alone and yet neither of us has as much room as he had before."

And the badger that night bit the porcupine with his sharp teeth.

And the porcupine threw a quill in the badger's nose.

And they went at it rough and tumble.

And the next day each went back to his own house.

JAMES W. FOLEY.

SONGS OF THE POETS

The Imprisoned Soul—By Walt Whitman (1819-1892)

At the last, tenderly,

From the walls of the powerful, fortress'd house,

From the clasp of the knitted locks—from the

keep of the well-closed doors,

Let me be wafted.

Let my glide noiselessly forth:

With the key of softness unlock the locks—with a whisper

Set ope the doors, O soul.

Tenderly, be not impatient,

(Strong is your hold, O mortal flesh, Strong is your hold, O love).

Reveals Storm's Secret of Rain Distribution

Where does the local storm start? This question which has been lurking in the back-

hall of most folks' minds since childhood is answered by

Prof. Charles F. Brooks, professor of meteorology of Clark university, Worcester, Mass.

Says Professor Brooks:

"Local thunderstorms tend to originate most often where large volumes of moist air

are readily warmed and forced upward; that is, over broad expanses of meadow-

land or river flats, over cities,

hills and mountains.

"Within a homogeneous

area, however, the wetting of strips by local showers temporarily, makes the dry strips

the loci of thunderstorm formation. At College Station,

Texas, during a rainy week in the latter part of last August,

this phenomenon was noted,

very clearly and local forecasts of thunderstorm rains were successfully based on the widths and position of strips wet by thunderstorms

on the preceding day.

"Daily rainfall statistics for stations within a homogeneous region for a period of local showers show marked differences in totals for any day. But," he says, "less important differences are noted for the period taken as a whole. Any area that escapes rain on the first day or two, heats more readily

than the surrounding wet

areas, and so becomes the center of greater expansion and inflow from the surroundings and in consequence is wet by the resulting shower.

"Or even if the shower produced by the local rising air is carried to other fields before discharging, any approaching shower will develop

most strongly over the dry area and therefore drench it more than those previously wet.

"Before a local thunderstorm can form, however,

there must be large local up-

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Five hundred I. W. W. followers of Bill Haywood followed him clear to Russia. There was held out to them the lure of high wages for labor under ideal conditions. That labor of any sort, for the most generous pay, could have appealed to the bunch, is a tribute to the magnetism of Bill.

Now the pilgrims want to come back. To them the United States, which once they had been wont to spit upon, represents a haven of great joy. They have found that every soviet representation made to them was a lie. They had taken some money with them, which was quickly removed from their persons by the greedy masters of the realm. Then they were turned loose to browse in a land of desolation where the friendly hand-out is unknown, and even the jail atmosphere presents no charm.

The men are in an embarrassing position. The country they spurned doesn't want them. Many of them it would reject. Others it would set to pounding rocks or picking oakum for their board. They have no money to pay for passage. There is no way in which they could give bond not to become public charges. They were truculent and rampaging loafers while here, and their absence causes no pain. They're out of luck, that's all.

The unfortunates are begging others of their kind not to leave this country for Russia. Yet all such others are more than welcome to go.

A newspaper report says that a chiropodist advocates the amputation of the little toe that insists upon harboring a corn. In his opinion the toe in question is useless anyhow. Moreover, in its absence the wearing of a narrower shoe would be possible.

It would be rash to trust a man holding such opinion with any instrument sharp enough to trim a pedal callosity.

The loss of the tiniest of the five toes would render the loser a cripple. The narrow shoe causes corns, but as everybody is aware of it, let such as insist upon the narrow shoe, accept consequences.

"Come out into the open. Stand up and tell us what is the issue in this campaign."

So bellowed Senator Johnson while speaking in Santa Rosa. Can it be possible that so distinguished a politician thinks that he can get away with such bunk?

Probably the familiar expression "God save the mark" was never uttered with more fervor than in Germany now.

It seems, however, to be too late.

A headline says that a woman publisher "puts Johnson under the glass."

The context shows that she had done so with a vim likely to put him under the political daisies.

When the mayor of Chicago took steps to fill the streets with bus lines, the street car strike just kind faded away.

When a man is ordered by a police officer to halt, if cautious and law-abiding, and conscious of the fact that he is being addressed by a policeman, and not a holdup, he will halt.

The fact that a man so addressed fails to heed the admonition, does not in itself constitute ground for shooting him. There have been many robberies. A belated citizen hearing a command to halt has as logical right to think that he is in the presence of the lawless, as that of a representative of the law. In the absence of means of defending himself, his first and natural impulse would be to run away.

This is apocryph of the recent killing of a man by a Los Angeles police officer. That the victim was a "Mexican revolutionist" is stated, but appears to be a circumstance having no relation to the case.

MRS. M. L. TIGHT BUSY ON PLANS FOR HOTEL TO STATE FOR STUDY

Local Realtor Forsakes Business Until Hostelry Is Under Construction

"I am not taking an active part in the selling of real estate at present, nor will I take a part until the new hotel proposition is started on the building," said Mrs. M. L. Tight yesterday when asked how the real estate business is standing the vacation season.

Mrs. Tight has, for the past two months, given her entire time and energy to the business of putting across the proposition of building a magnificent hotel on the corner of East Broadway and Glendale avenue. The hotel will be erected on the site of the proposed Ambrosini hotel.

Mrs. Tight said yesterday: "I have given of my time and energy to help secure this hotel for Glendale willingly because I feel that it is my duty as a good citizen of Glendale to do everything in my power for the good of the city that is my home. I have been actively interested in real estate here for many years and know the needs of the city."

"The hotel was the most urgent need. Mr. Ingledue and myself have done nothing but work for the hotel since the proposal was first made by H. J. Tremaine, to build and operate a hostelry in this city."

That Mrs. Tight's efforts have been successful is evidenced by the fact that practically the entire amount of money required for the building of the hostelry has been raised and that within a few weeks workmen will actually be busy on the erection of the building. It is planned to open the hotel about January 1.

Mrs. Tight is probably one of the best known real estate dealers in the city. She has been connected with several of the largest land deals that have ever been made here during the past few years. She has been called by some of her friends an "irrepressible optimist."

The new hotel when completed will stand as a monument to the untiring energy of Mrs. Tight and the untiring citizens who gave of their time and money to make the hotel dream a reality.

GOOD VAUDEVILLE AND PICTURES AT T. D. L.

Variety Program That Is Different Is to Be Offered

Ralph Allan will stage some more "special" vaudeville at his theatre tonight and tomorrow night, when he offers the patrons of the T. D. L. the comedy playlet "You Mustn't Suspect," prepared and arranged by Martha Oatman, the talented actress, with a company of four players. This special vaudeville act is patented after the famous play "Twin Beds," and is a scream of a show. It is, by the way, booked over one of the biggest and best vaudeville circuits in America, receiving its initial showing here. In addition to "You Mustn't Suspect," Allan will also offer James Gordon, the singing tramp who, with his rich baritone voice, came into notice in Glendale yesterday when he was found singing in the streets here. Then, of course, there is still more show. Lon Chaney in "The Trap" is the film feature and it is one of this famous actor's best photoplays. The comedy, "Breaking Into Jail" is another scream, and the whole program is a whole of a show—at the T. D. and L. Popular prices.

U. OF C. MEN WIN PRIZES FOR CAN ESSAYS

Glass Containers' Association Contest Closes National Contest

University of California men have won two of the four prizes offered by the Glass Containers' association in a national competition for the most valuable paper on canning or any feature relating to canning or preserving. The first prize was won by Cal Singh, a Hindu student who graduated from the college of agriculture with the class of 1921. Singh prepared a paper on "Factors concerned in manufacturing fruit products."

A prominent eastern university states that this article is a distinct contribution to the knowledge of jams and jellies. The paper is to be published as a series of articles in the trade magazine "Canning Age," and is being followed closely by the managers of canning factories and others interested in this line of work.

J. R. Herman, a graduate student in the college of agriculture, won the third prize in the national competition with a paper on "The Utilization of Grape Products." The second and fourth prizes went to students in eastern universities.

A net-like, rubber-coated fabric has been invented to be fastened to the under side of rugs to prevent them slipping on polished floors, without marring the latter.

Museum Is Busy Examining Animal That Packs a Wallop in His Feet

The California Museum of Vertebrate Zoology has recently received a nomenclature of the Australian duck-billed platypus, the most primitive of living mammals. This rare and interesting specimen was given to the University of California by Mr. Ellis, Stanley Joseph, a dealer in wild animals who recently brought a large collection of foreign animals from Sydney, Australia.

The duck-billed platypus is a semi-aquatic species which lives along rivers. Structurally it combines in one animal characteristics ordinarily associated with diverse sorts of animal life. The body is covered with dense hair like that of a muskrat. The mouth is produced into a large flat bill like that of a domestic duck, yet larger. The toes are all provided with long sharp claws, while on each of the fore feet is a flap of soft skin which serves as a paddle when the animal is swimming. On the inner side of each hind foot is a stout spur which resembles that of a game cock except that the duck-bill's spur is traversed by a tube which connects with a poison gland. This is found only in the male species, which sex the university's specimen belongs.

EDUCATIONAL WORK AT THE SO. CALIF. FAIR

Junior Department to Be Much in Evidence at Annual Show

The junior department will be the big attractive feature at the Southern California fair this fall and the boy and girl will be very much in evidence. Every department of junior activity will be shown in carefully set out details. The method of imparting vocational instruction used in our high schools will be shown in actual operation. The state will show the method used in its work of teaching new vocations to disabled citizens.

The junior fair takes up all branches of agricultural education and under the direction of the boys and girls department, agriculture and animal husbandry will be conducted. A model farm will be shown and the various divisions of farm work will be demonstrated by boys from agricultural high schools.

The state livestock judging contest will attract teams from 60 or more of the high schools of Southern California. The three high teams from Riverside with three teams from Sacramento will compete for first honors at a central contest at Davis.

An agricultural short course will be conducted each day during the fair by competent instructors in front of the grandstand and some very essential part of farm economy, either in the animal or soil divisions, will be demonstrated and discussed.

It has been found that potash, nitrates and other valuable chemicals can be obtained from mud. The valuable refuse of the Nile river that often interferes with navigation.

of the East Glendale Advancement association Thursday noon at the Broadway inn, where covers were laid for about fifty. Judge H. E. Lowe, who presented the arguments for the bond issue called by the city for August 29, or three specific purposes—$25,000 for a comfort and rest station, $35,000 for a new street car, $35,000 for school property and $40,000 for building an annex to the present city hall. The dimensions of the proposed addition were given as 88x68 and the judge described the accommodations planned for the police department, jail, court room and magistrate's office, jury room, welfare bureau, and the various offices of the city attorney and assistant attorney. On motion of Charles E. Stanley, the association voted an endorsement of the proposed bond issue, hotel, as due to the working out of minor escrow details in perfecting title, the law forbidding the turning of shovel of earth and such circumstances until title technically perfect.

Chairman John Lampert and President Ingledue reported progress in the securing of the railroad bonus blocked by refusal of the Ross, Sparr and Newport interests to subscribe until assured of a more satisfactory passenger tariff, the southern section making the same objection. He stated that a conference had been had with the officials who he hoped would lead to some adjustment of the matter that would change the attitude of the representatives mentioned and induce them to generously contribute.

Mrs. Tight and Mrs. Ingledue also mentioned the high school

In response to a request for information, Councilman Kimlin said that the provision for paving streets abutting on school property was included in the bond issue because neither the city nor the board of education had funds available for the purpose and it was a disgrace to the city to leave those streets unpaved.

In thanking the association for its vote, Judge Love called attention to the fact that the assessed value of Glendale's taxable property has practically doubled within the past year, being now over $22,000,000.

Dr. Stuart reminded members of the municipal picnic under the aspices of the credit association to be held August 16 in the new city park, setting forth the many attractions on the day's program and urging everyone to shut up shop and go out and help dedicate the park.

About half a dozen guests were introduced, including Judge Lowe and William McMullin, who were persuaded to enroll as members on condition that some of the east-siders reciprocate by joining the West End Improvement association.

WALT NICOLIS HAS 49 REASONS FOR MOORE VOTE

Each Persuades Him to Oppose Senator
Johnson

Walt H. Nicolis, in a letter to the Editor of The Glendale Daily Press, declares he has 49 reasons for voting against Senator Johnson. His letter follows:
Editor of The Glendale Daily Press.
Dear Sir: I have 49 reasons why I, as a Republican, cannot support Senator Johnson at the primaries this year. A few of the reasons are:

First—He certainly does not show by his actions or votes in the United States senate that he is a Republican. He may have been in 1910 when the party nominated and elected him governor of the state, but two years later he told you he was not a Republican, had turned his back on the party and many friends that had honored him. Not only that, but he had acquired in that great plan that virtually disfranchised the thousands of Republican voters and many of those same voters helped make him governor in 1910. Was that the act of a Republican? In 1916 again the Republicans of California renewed their faith in his Republicanism and he received a wonderful majority, while the chief standard-bearer on that ticket was defeated. It is not reasonable, it is unbelievable, that Senator Johnson, with over 250,000 majority, could not have influence enough to have elected Hughes had he so minded. Is he or is he not a Republican?

Again, so recent as in the last year he is quoted as voting against the confirmation of W. H. Taft for the supreme court bench. Republican and one that has forgotten more national and international law than the senator ever knew or ever will know.

Is the senator a Republican or is he not?

Second—The senator is a quitter. (When the quitting is good.)

You elect him for four years in 1910. In 1912 he tries to quit the job, but the quitting wasn't good after spending some six months of your time. He took up the old job for he still had it in 1914 again. He was elected to the old job again in 1916. He tried to and did quit it and also helped dump the national ticket at the same time. Is he now or ever has he been a Republican?

Again in 1920 he got the fever for a change and tried to quit the new job, but again the quitting was not good. But as of old, he had a job. There you have it. Governor two years and tried to quit. (Quitting not good.)

Again an intermission between acts of two years; 1916, quitting good, did quit; 1920, four years later, quitting not good; 1922 is a good time to quit and the Republican voters of California should see that he gets a legal notice dated Aug. 29, 1922. It is the logical time every two years. Of course, if he don't quit now he will try it again in 1924, the next two-year period.

"More votes for Moore,
Votes for Moore galore,
Votes for Johnson no more."

REMAIL LETTERS WRONGLY DIRECTED

Assistant Postmaster Geo. Hallett is making a plea to the people of Glendale to be more prompt in remailing letters that have been delivered to the wrong address. Mr. Hallett said this morning:

"Several cases have come to my attention recently where letters were delivered to the wrong address. The parties receiving the letters, through carelessness, neglected to remain them and in several cases delayed the correct delivery of letters for several weeks.

"This is the result of carelessness and for the improvement of the service I am asking that if a letter is delivered to the wrong address that the receiving party remail it at once. The letter may be important and should be delivered at once."

RHOADES BECOMES JUROR AGAIN

When the Glendale Merchants' ball team and the team from the Cleary Athletic club meet Wednesday at the picnic of the Glendale Credit association, a new set of umpires will be officiating. It is possible that business will pick up on Thursday.

James Rhoades, secretary of the chamber of commerce, and City Manager W. H. Reeves have been selected as the umpires. Umpire Rhoades will call balls and strikes while Umpire Reeves keeps an eye on the bases.

Mr. Rhoades said this morning that arrangements are being made with the committee in charge of the picnic to have all spectators at the game searched for pop bottles, hen fruit and other missiles before they are admitted to the game.

BURBANK MAN'S CAR IS MISSING

A machine belonging to Charles A. Schelink of Burbank was stolen from his home a day or so ago, and it is believed the thief came to the Glendale section, according to a report made by the Burbank police to the local authorities. The members of the Glendale police squad have been notified to look for this missing car.

Net Debt of Canada

THE POET'S PROTEST

JAMES W. FOLEY

Oh, Toastmaster glib and urbane,
On your humorous spree,
Please, Toastmaster, won't you refrain,
When you introduce me,
From saying my verse is so highly Regarded, you see,
That the mantle of Field or of Riley
Has fallen on me?

Oh, Toastmaster, when you arise,
With a fork in your hand,
And the sparkle of jest in your eyes,
And a joke that has spanned
Some five generations or ten,
Won't you give me my own
Little place in the sun among men
And let Riley alone?

Toastmaster, you speak of me highly,
To that I'll agree,
But the mantle of Field or of Riley
Descended on me,
Would be so big for me and wide
It would shut off my breath,
And like a small boy lost inside
I should smother to death.

So Toastmaster, blithesome and gay,
Leave it there on the shelf,
The mantle of Riley and say
I am only myself.
Let me have my own buckler and shield,
Drop that often rehearsed
"He's a second Jim Riley or Field"—
Call me Someone the First.

Babson's Letter

GERMAN COLLAPSE AND AMERICAN BUSINESS

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., Aug. 12.—The German question was discussed today by Roger W. Babson, statistician, who has been entangling the international and financial situation.

"Germany has failed to meet her obligation on the indemnity payments," says Mr. Babson, "and like any other concern is judged bankrupt. We face the same situation that we find when a business can not pay its debts. We either have a re-organization and try to get it back on its feet or we call in the referee and judge it bankrupt and sell its assets and put it out of business."

"The world is now having a creditors' meeting to decide what is to be done with Germany. Up to the present time France, the largest creditor, has been taking the pound of flesh. It is only within the past few days that she has offered any other proposition. Now, however, France sees that if she will let Germany off that England will let France off. It is understood that a French ambassador is dealing with the United States government at this time, in the hope that the republic may be released from some of the debts she owes to us. These later developments are favorable indeed, and strongly suggest that a friendly re-organization of German finance is possible.

"If France on the other hand were to march an army to Berlin, and attempt to collect the pound of flesh by force, it is quite possible that this might align Russia, Italy and even possibly England with Germany and bring about another war. This, of course, would be an undesirable result from every point of view. Such action would undoubtedly cause a panic in our stock market, and would seriously embarrass our big banks. It would upset business generally. We would not even experience the business boom that we had at the beginning of the last European war. The new gases and chemical weapons of warfare developed since 1918 can be made just as well in Europe as over here.

"If, however, Germany has a friendly re-organization of her finances it would mean much and boom American business. Such a re-organization would clear the air and overcome the fear of repudiation which keeps all our foreign transactions in a muddle. It would do away with the uncertainty of the situation and arranged to the mutual satisfaction of all parties concerned it would give the whole world the confidence it needs at this particular time. It would strengthen business everywhere. The greatest act of the benefit would be felt in America. I certainly hope that this will be the outcome."

"In the meantime," concluded Mr. Babson, "we must remember one thing more, there is a distinct difference between Germany's governmental finances and the finances of German firms and corporations. The credit of Germany's government is almost nil because of the tons of paper marks which it is obliged to redeem. The banks are also in a rather uncertain position because their cash assets are of very uncertain value. The private firms of Germany, however, hold real property, factories, machinery, land equipment and merchandise. Most of them are in a sound condition because these things are of actual and permanent value. The reorganization of Germany's finance would upset the German government's financial bureau and might call for considerable readjustment in Germany's banking circles. It need have little effect on the real credit of private firms."

General business is maintaining its recent improvement in spite of unfavorable sentiment created by coal and rail strikes. The index of the Babsonchart shows that business is but 9 percent below normal. No change since last week.

Gaston Glass, who will be seen tonight at the Glendale theatre as leading man for Viola Dana in the Bayard Veiller production for Metro of "There Are No Villains," is the young actor who came into prominence in Fanny Hurst's "Humoresque." ### A Year Ago Today

From the Glendale Daily Press of August 11, 1921.

Despondent Mrs. P. L. Woolard, 145 Pacific avenue, attempted to end her life at 7:30 o'clock this morning. She fired a shell from a 30-gauge shotgun into her side, the charge of shot entering the body just below the heart. Physicians say that she has a chance for recovery.

Shipments of material to be used in the construction of the proposed high-power line to extend to Patterson public park are being received daily.

The music section of the Tuesday Afternoon club plans to bring American music to the fore during the coming year. Mrs. C. L. Marlene, curator of this section, says that this object shall be the task during the coming year for the club. She also hopes to make the section the patron of music students and offer them an opportunity to perform.

Senator Lodge was holding forth about small nations. A little nation that had been put in its place by the allies was under discussion, and the senator from Massachusetts held that nations like individuals, occasionally stood in need of reproof.

"The allies conducted themselves very nicely, I think," said the senator. "They were like the beautiful girl to whom an ugly and poverty-stricken man had the temerity to propose marriage. 'Let's get married,' the bachelor said, grabbing the girl's hand. 'But who'd have us?' she laughed."

A profiteer was bragging about his newly-acquired motor car. He ended his eulogy by declaring: "It runs so smoothly that you can't feel it; so quietly that you can't hear it; it has such perfect ignition that you can't smell it, and as for speed, why, my boy, you can't see it!" His friend looked startled.

"Bless my soul!" he exclaimed, anxiously, "how do you know the car is there at all?"

Arrested by Police, Man-

Theatre

Some person was the cause yesterday of the arrest of James Gordon, a street singer, who had sung in the streets of Glendale the greater part of the day. Gordon is possessed of a rich baritone voice, and his singing aroused admiration and attention wherever he sang. At the city hall Gordon told his story. He is a miner, but employment in that line has almost ceased in late years. He was forced to wander from place to place, getting such work to do as he could, and singing wherever opportunity afforded. His intentions were of the best and his singing gave pleasure to many. He wanted work and sought it. It was suggested that he see Ralph Allan, manager of the T. D. and L. theatre. This he did. Allan tried him out, and was not only interested in the man, but because of his rich voice gave him employment to sing in his theatre today and tomorrow, afternoon and night. Gordon was all smiles. The police realized the man was all right. Allan stood responsible for him and said he thought he had made a find. Hear him at the T. D. and L. theatre tonight and tomorrow.

YOUNG FOLKS AT MOUNT HERMAN

The annual Christian Endeavor conference at Mt. Herman is attracting young people from all parts of the state. The Glendale Presbyterian church is well represented in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Brown, whose activities in Christian Endeavor work are well known: the Misses Mildred Elliott, Inez Harrison, Marie Maier, Paul Edwards and Daryl Parker. Mr. M. P. Harrison drove north with his daughter, Miss Inez, who was accompanied by her friend, Miss Mildred Elliott.

An artist possessed a dog to which he was much attached. One day his pet contracted an affection of the throat, whereupon the artist sent for a specialist, a famous doctor, who, when he found he had been called to treat a dog, was far from pleased. He examined the animal's throat, however, and after pocketing a substantial fee, departed. A day or two later he sent hurriedly for the artist, who dropped his work and rushed over to the famous doctor's office. On his arrival the eminent specialist said, gravely: "How do you do, sir? I wanted to see you about having my front door painted."
